Inflation Hits Poor Hardest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional economists say inflation in 1973 was harder on the nation's poor than other segments of the economy. And, said the report by the Joint Economic Committee, 1974 holds no prospect of improvement.

"There is no indication at this time that the rate of inflation will moderate in 1974 and consequently the real purchasing power of consumers is likely to continue to decline," the report said.

It forecast a possible recession because of what it said would be rising unemployment, a sluggish economy and the energy crisis.

"In view of the recent slowdown in economic activity and the energy crisis unemployment will certainly increase during 1974," said the report, written by the committee's Consumer Economics subcommittee.

"This situation of higher prices and fewer jobs will further erode consumer income and confidence, which in turn will add substantially to recessionary prospects in 1974," the report said.

It said that middle-income families had to pay more in 1973 to live at 1972 levels because of inflation, but that higher food, housing and fuel prices were about one-third larger for low income consumers than in the previous year.

The congressional economists said that a middle-income family earning $12,614 in 1973 had to spend $1,168 more to keep the same standard of living experienced in 1972.

Two items, alone — food prices up $502 and housing costs at $165 more than the previous year — accounted for more than half the total rise, the report said.

But the report also said middle-income families paid 15 per cent more in taxes and 31 per cent more in Social Security.

Weather

Cloudy and warmer today, tonight and Tuesday. High today, upper 30s. Low tonight, lower 30s. High Tuesday, mid 40s. Probability of precipitation, 10 per cent today and 20 per cent tonight and tomorrow. Temperatures Sunday were: high, 25; low, 24.

Oil Firms Admit Low Production

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials of some of the nation's largest oil companies acknowledge that their industry could have produced more domestic crude oil in recent years but decided against it because it wouldn't have been profitable.

The officials said their companies were only exercising sound business judgments in ignoring such oil, and, to a man, they blamed federal policies and regulations for the situation.

Ten executives from eight of the biggest 10 oil companies made their statements in separate interviews with The Associated Press. Most of the men asked not to be identified either by name or by company.

"The oil we're talking about is in fields that are in secondary and tertiary recovery stages," said one of the officials. "It's very expensive to produce that oil and with the prices we could have gotten for it (under federal price regulation) in past years, we would have lost money."

"To some people, I know that's going to sound evil. But we have a business proposition here. It's hard-headed business economics."

The industry executives were unanimous in blaming federal policies for the lag in domestic oil production. They said price regulation did not allow them sufficient profit to encourage domestic exploration and drilling.

Also cited were the delays in development of the North Slope in Alaska, restrictions on foreign imports and the unavailability of new offshore leases.

"The combination of government policies and the lack of new leases made investment by the oil companies in this country somewhat unattractive," said Norman DeBay, manager of investor relations for the Gulf Oil Corp., the nation's fourth largest oil company.

"The oil companies spent their money overseas where the investment opportunities were good," DeBay said. "I think it's quite a logical thing to have done."

A spokesman for the Federal Energy Office said government officials were aware that there is available domestic oil that the industry has failed to produce.

"Many of the regulation and policy changes made over the past months have been aimed at making production of that oil more attractive to the industry," Gene Curella, the FEO spokesman, said. But he added there was some question whether the industry should have sought those incentives.

"It may make good business sense to the industry to leave that oil in the ground," Curella said. "But is it right to place that high a priority on profits when the nation is in the midst of an energy crisis like we have now?"

Last month, the Cost of Living Council approved a $1 a barrel increase in the price of regulated domestic crude oil, bringing to $5.25 a barrel the price oil companies can charge purchasers. The council earlier had exempted from price controls new domestic petroleum production.

Both measures were intended to encourage production and development, and oil industry officials indicated the new measures probably would have the desired effect.

"With the prices going up, we're taking another look at the oil it wasn't economical to produce before," one executive said. "The industry undoubtedly will produce that oil when it is financially worthwhile for us to do so."

Frank N. Ikard, president of the American Petroleum Institute, an industry trade organization, said the amount of oil recoverable from a petroleum field varies widely depending on specific conditions.

But in many cases, he said, the oil recovery can be increased, often almost doubled, by applying special techniques to maintain the underground pressures that force oil to the surface.

Just how much oil is recovered from any field depends largely on the cost of recovery, compared with prevailing prices, Ikard said.

The relaxation of government oil regulations has been responsible, at least in part, for oil company plans to drastically increase their capital spending for 1974.

Jan. 6 Accident Victim Dies

Twenty-two-year-old Danny L. Newell, Columbus, died 6:30 a.m. Sunday in Mt. Carmel Hospital, as a result of injuries received in a single-car accident 4:45 a.m. Jan. 6.

2 Dead In 1974

Newell becomes Pickaway County's second fatality, in a period of less than one week, for 1974.

The accident, investigated by Sheriff's Deputy Earl Kuhn, reported Newell went off the left berm into the median strip of U.S. Road 23 near the Route 22 cloverleaf. Traveling into the median strip, the Volkswagen auto hit the end of a guard rail.

He was being treated at Mt. Carmel Hospital for massive head and eye injuries.

Newell was a Sergeant in the U.S. Air Force stationed at Lockbourne.

He is survived by his widow, Kida Hill Newell; one son, Tony Lee; two brothers, Harold, Pt. Pleasant, W. Va.; Staff Sgt. Archie Newell.

Kidnaped Boy Found Dead; Tied To Tree Near Home

JAMESTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — The partly frozen, bruised body of a 14-year-old kidnap victim has been found tied to a tree in a heavily wooded area near his home, authorities said.

Investigators said the snow-covered body of Daniel Ebersole, who had been missing since Tuesday night, was found slumped against the tree Sunday by an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and a deputy sheriff.

Investigators said a glove had been stuffed in the youth's mouth and held in place with surgical tape. They said a ski mask had been pulled over his face, covering his eyes.

Authorities said the cause of death had not been determined and that an autopsy had been scheduled for today.

The body was found after an anonymous telephone call.

Daniel's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Glen M. Ebersole of the Jamestown suburb of Lakewood, had paid $15,000 ransom for the boy Thursday. And authorities arrested three area teen-agers Saturday, charging them with kidnaping.

Kenneth L. Williams, 18, and Martin C. Whitmore, 19, of West Ellicott, and Jeffrey L. Swan, 18, of Lakewood were arraigned in Buffalo, N.Y., Saturday and ordered jailed in lieu of $100,000 bond each.

Most of the ransom money has been recovered, said Special Agent Richard H. Ash of the Buffalo FBI office.

Ebersole, a prominent Jamestown physician, said Daniel was seen last when he left for the Lakewood Teen Center, a short walk from his home. The doctor said he notified police when the boy did not return home that night.

The physician said a telephone caller told him late Tuesday night that Daniel had been kidnaped. The caller threatened Daniel's life unless a ransom was paid, the doctor said.

He said the caller telephoned again Wednesday night, repeated the threat and gave instructions for leaving the ransom.

On Thursday, Ebersole left the $15,000 ransom — $10 and $20 bills wrapped in foil and covered with brown paper — in a boat behind an auto agency.

The next day, the three youths were arrested and $14,640 recovered from Whitmore's residence, authorities said.

Ash said FBI agents had kept a watch on the drop area.

KSU Probe Resumes

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Federal grand jurors probing a 1970 clash of student demonstrators and Ohio National Guardsmen called for testimony today by two students wounded in the confrontation.

Those two—Dean Kahler, 23, a junior at Kent State, and Joseph Lewis Jr. of Massillon—were on hand Friday but weren't called into the hearing room before the jury recessed for the weekend. They said they were told to return today.

Today's session opened the third week of hearings on the May 4 incident in which four Kent State University students were killed and nine others were wounded.

There was no indication what the jurors would take into consideration next in their secret sessions looking into the possibility that federal laws were violated during the confrontation.

The jurors heard testimony last week from the other seven wounded students.

Ohio Solons Face Bill On New School Times

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Rep. James Mueller, D-74 Chesterland, will introduce a bill this week requiring all of Ohio's school districts to start classes an hour later because of Daylight Saving Time.

"Many children throughout the state are going to school while it is still dark. The possibility of accidents involving school children during these morning hours has increased astronomically," Mueller said.

Mueller said his bill will require "no major changes" in school activities and will help save energy because many parents, since DST went into effect Jan. 6, have started driving their children to school.

"The whole idea of changing to daylight time now was to save energy," he said.

The House and Senate return from weekend recess at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. Both chambers have bills up for a vote at floor sessions preceding Gov. John J. Gilligan's "State of the State" address to a joint session Tuesday night.

Gilligan will ask the lawmakers for special powers to implement federal energy legislation, including a 55 mile per hour speed limit.

He also is expected to propose a seven-member energy board to consist of four appointed members and the heads of the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency, the Public Utilities Commission, and the Department of Economic and Community Development.

The governor's speech will include matters other than the energy crisis. He will have proposals in the fields of political campaign financing, election reform, welfare, and others, said Robert Tenenbaum, Gilligan's press secretary.

Tuesday afternoon, the House has up for consideration a bill that will give

Ohio families a break when they file their 1974 state income tax returns a year from now.

The measure removes an existing $3,000 ceiling on the total exemption a family can claim, no matter how large the family. If passed, a head of a household will be able to claim $500 for each dependent, regardless of family size.

The bill by House Ways and Means Chairman George D. Tablack, D-52 Campbell, is needed to implement a constitutional amendment that took the $3,000 limit out of the Ohio Constitution. Voters approved the amendment last Nov. 6.

Also up for House action is a bill that takes out of state law a provision that would require Ohio to elect a short term U.S. senator this fall.

Under present law, a short-term senator must be elected to serve the 19 days from Dec. 15 to Jan. 3, the day the six-year senator elected next November will be sworn into office.

If the bill is passed, it means Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, appointed by the governor to serve out the year remaining in the Senate term of U.S. Atty. Gen. William Saxbe, will serve uninterrupted until Jan. 3.

Metzenbaum is seeking the Democratic nomination for a full term.

Ohio would restore Nov. 11 as the date for Veterans Day under another measure up for a House floor vote Tuesday.

Unopposed in the State Government Committee, the bill would end the state's involvement with a federal statute that permits the holiday to be observed on the last Monday in October.

Senators have a pair of bills up for consideration, including one requiring notice to be given to property owners before they are required to cover up or remove junk automobiles.

Kissinger Pushes Plan

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today Egypt and Israel both agree with his efforts to get a troop pullback accord on the Suez front and negotiations have progressed to the detailed drafting stage.

"Your secretary of state, when he sticks his fingers in something, he generally brings it to a successful conclusion," Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy told newsmen. "And I think he will this time."

Sitting on a sunlit veranda at Aswan in upper Egypt, Kissinger told the newsmen that his shuttling mediation talks with Egyptians and Israelis are "the toughest I have been in."

He and President Anwar Sadat set up joint teams of draftsmen to work on the detailed language of an accord to separate Israeli and Egyptian forces along the uneven and explosive Suez Canal cease-fire lines left from the October Middle East war.

"I think both parties agree with the efforts," Kissinger said.

Kissinger, who delayed his return to Israel by several hours, said he probably will see Sadat again before carrying the proposal back to Jerusalem later today for consideration by the Israeli cabinet.

"It is a very tough problem," he added. "It is hard to reconcile."

The fast-traveling American secretary said he may then return to Aswan — in what would be the third time in his current tour — to get Sadat's reaction to any changes the Israelis might propose.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy issued a statement Sunday renewing Egypt's demand for total Israeli withdrawal from all occupied Arab territory. It rejected a "unilateral peace" with Israel — one that does not include Syria and Jordan.

Despite the bristling tone, U. S. officials with Kissinger believed the statement was designed to soothe the radical Arab quarters and was not a sign of unhappiness with the disengagement proposal.

There is a strong feeling among some Israeli officials that Sadat needs the withdrawal of the Israeli army from the west bank of the canal before the Egyptian public becomes more aware of Israel's gains in that region during the October war.

Kissinger during his Sunday in Israel met with two groups seeking the return of soldiers held prisoner in Syria. "He arouses faith in us," said a spokesman for one of the groups after the meeting.

U.S. officials said Kissinger is making periodic appeals to the Soviet government to fulfill its promise to use its influence on Syria in regard to the POWs.

Israeli Deputy Premier Yigal Allon said Israel is ready to negotiate a troop disengagement with the Syrians as well as the Egyptians as soon as Damascus forwards a list of the POWs and allows representatives of the International Red Cross to visit them.

But high-ranking sources in Damascus dismissed Allon's offer as "just another tricky maneuver" and "part of the standard treacherous policy of Israel to divert us from basic issues into discussing marginal matters."

U.S. officials said earlier that Kissinger might fly to Damascus before returning to Washington, but he later told newsmen that no decision for such a trip had yet been taken.

Thaw Pushes Way Across Northern U.S.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A January thaw prevailed over the northern two-thirds of the nation from the Pacific Coast to the Mississippi today.

But temperatures in the eastern Plains and northern Atlantic Coast states failed to rise above freezing.

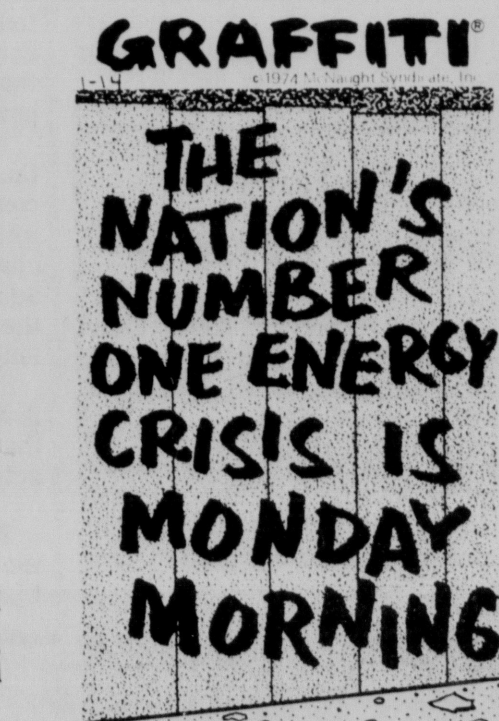

Dense fog persisted over parts of central and Southern California, and rain was reported in western Washington state with some snow in Idaho and western Montana.

Fair skies were the general rule east of southern California to the Northern and Central Plains and western Texas.

From eastern Texas through much of the lower Mississippi Valley, fog, rain and drizzle dominated the weather picture, while some fog spread into the middle and upper Mississippi Valley.

Some snow dusted northern Iowa and portions of eastern Minnesota and upper Michigan, and showers sprinkled southeast Florida and the north-central Gulf Coast states into Tennessee.

Two inches of rain accumulated at West Palm Beach, Fla., with about a half-inch at Mullan, Idaho, and Sacramento, Calif. Otherwise, the rainfall was light.

He also is expected to propose a seven-member energy board to consist of four appointed members and the heads of the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency, the Public Utilities Commission, and the Department of Economic and Community Development.

The governor's speech will include matters other than the energy crisis. He will have proposals in the fields of political campaign financing, election reform, welfare, and others, said Robert Tenenbaum, Gilligan's press secretary.

Tuesday afternoon, the House has up for consideration a bill that will give

Ohio families a break when they file their 1974 state income tax returns a year from now.

The measure removes an existing $3,000 ceiling on the total exemption a family can claim, no matter how large the family. If passed, a head of a household will be able to claim $500 for each dependent, regardless of family size.

The bill by House Ways and Means Chairman George D. Tablack, D-52 Campbell, is needed to implement a constitutional amendment that took the $3,000 limit out of the Ohio Constitution. Voters approved the amendment last Nov. 6.

Also up for House action is a bill that takes out of state law a provision that would require Ohio to elect a short term U.S. senator this fall.

Under present law, a short-term senator must be elected to serve the 19 days from Dec. 15 to Jan. 3, the day the six-year senator elected next November will be sworn into office.

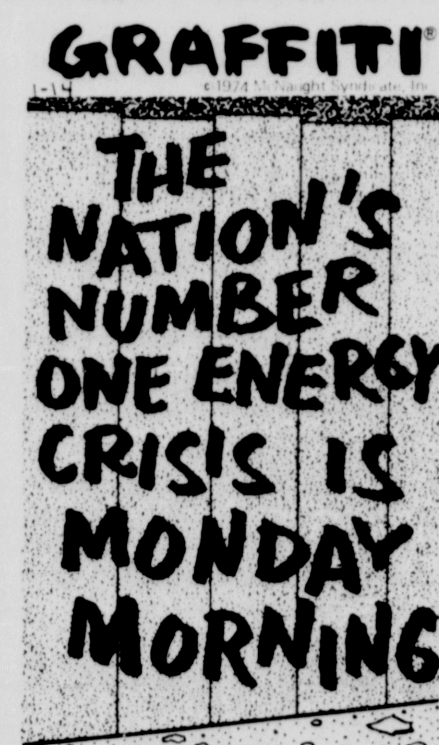

If the bill is passed, it means Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, appointed by the governor to serve out the year remaining in the Senate term of U.S. Atty. Gen. William Saxbe, will serve uninterrupted until Jan. 3.

Metzenbaum is seeking the Democratic nomination for a full term.

Ohio would restore Nov. 11 as the date for Veterans Day under another measure up for a House floor vote Tuesday.

Unopposed in the State Government Committee, the bill would end the state's involvement with a federal statute that permits the holiday to be observed on the last Monday in October.

Sensors have a pair of bills up for consideration, including one requiring notice to be given to property owners before they are required to cover up or remove junk automobiles.

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Elmer Wayne Henley's lawyers want to exclude as trial evidence the 17-year-old's confessions to police about a 2½-year rampage of homosexual rape and torture killings of 27 teen-agers.

Henley, who was only 14 when the killings started, is charged in six murder indictments returned by a Harris County grand jury. His trial opens today.

State District Judge William M. Hatten has reserved the opening days for pretrial motions. The hardest fought ones are expected to be motions by defense lawyer Will Gray, 48, to exclude from evidence oral and written confessions Henley made to police.

Charles Melder, 44, who heads the defense team of lawyers, says: "We'll proceed on the assumption the boy was without counsel at the time, and wasn't adequately warned of his rights."

Without the Henley statements the state's case could be seriously weakened, prosecution lawyers say.

The prosecution says there is only one other witness to the killings: David Owen Brooks, 18, himself charged with four murders. Brooks, due to be tried beginning March 4, will not testify at the Henley trial. Such testimony would incriminate him, even though he has given a statement linking Henley to at least seven deaths, prosecutors say. The U.S. Constitution allows a person to refrain from giving self-incriminating testimony.

Dean Arnold Corll, 33, the man police call the mastermind of the ring, was shot dead by Henley. It was Henley's shooting of Corll during a sex and paint-sniffing party last Aug. 8 which broke open the case.

After the shooting, later ruled self-defense, police say Henley began telling them about the series of murders. At first they were incredulous, but soon they found Henley was telling them the truth. He and Brooks led them to 27 buried bodies in three locations.

Henley has been indicted in six of the murders but is being tried for only one of them now: the death of Charles Ray Cobble, 17.

Cobble, who lived across the street from Henley in the fading Heights neighborhood close to downtown Houston, was found dead two weeks after he disappeared, buried along with 16 other youths in a boat stall rented by Corll.

Melder says he does not plan to ask for a change of venue, despite the massive publicity. He also has said in court that he plans to "raise insanity at the time of the offense as a defense."

Judge Hatten has estimated pretrial arguments over motions could take between three days and two weeks. Then comes jury selection, which Hatten said could last from one to four weeks.

The jury will be locked up for the duration of the trial.

Tunisia-Libya Merger Slated

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After five unsuccessful attempts in 16 years to unite some of the Arab countries, the new match of oil-rich Libya and poor Tunisia is being greeted with skepticism.

Lebanese newspapers suggested that Col. Moammar Khadafy, the militant Libyan leader, had turned to Tunisia's moderate President Habib Bourguiba out of pique at the failure of his attempt last year to merge with Egypt.

Bourguiba presumably hopes his country — with twice as many people and one-tenth the area — will benefit from Libya's enormous oil revenue.

Algeria's official news agency, APS, declared that unity of two peoples can only be based "on concrete realities and similar options in all fields" and not on "one single decree, however grandiloquent." This was a pointed rebuff to a statement from Bourguiba expressing hope that Algeria would join the union.

Khadafy and Bourguiba signed an agreement Saturday to unite their countries into a new state to be called the Arab Islamic Republic, with a single executive, legislature, army, flag and constitution. The merger will be submitted to a referendum, and approval is considered certain.

But the Libyan and Tunisian governments are dominated by their two leaders, and the two men appear to have significantly more differences than similarities.

Bourguiba, for example, has been the only Arab leader to call openly for recognition of Israel and negotiations with the Jewish state provided it withdraws from all occupied Arab territories. Khadafy continues to reject negotiations and calls for a holy war and liquidation of Israel.

Bourguiba at 70 is one of the West's best friends in the Arab world and hospitable to both Western influence and aid in his country. Khadafy at 31 is a fiery Islamic nationalist who has tried to expel foreign influence from his country and calls for the rest of the Arabs to do the same.

Last summer, Bourguiba was strongly critical of Libya, saying "some Libyans still live in the Stone Age" and the country should develop its technology before thinking of union with other countries.

But Tunisia has a population of 5.1 million, an area of only 63,000 square miles, few resources, much unemployment and a sizable trade deficit. Libya has 2.1 million people, 10 times Tunisia's area and a per capita income of $1,700 a year and rising all the time thanks to its oil production.

This is Bourguiba's first flirtation with Arab unity.

In 1958, Egypt and Syria tried federation, and so did Jordan and Iraq. Both collapsed. A 1970 alliance of Egypt, Libya and the Sudan never got off the ground. The same three countries plus Syria tried a loose union in 1972 with no success. And last year Libya and Egypt announced a merger, but Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has held back.

Kentucky Rules Changes Pushed

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Democratic and Republican state senators were scheduled to caucus today prior to the start of the regular Senate session to discuss rules changes that could affect the operation of their powerful Rules Committee.

The Rules Committee is made up of the leadership of both parties and it controls the flow of bills from the committee to the Senate floor. A rules change in a resolution that must be adopted by the Senate provides that the Rules Committee can hold bills no longer than five days.

Present rules allow the committee, if it wants, to hold a bill indefinitely, so that it never gets to the Senate floor for action.

Fire Causes $9500 Damage

A fire, 7:08 a.m. Monday at the Bernard E. Smith residence, 327 E. Union St., caused an estimated $6500 to the building and $3,000 to the contents.

The Circleville Fire Department was dispatched to the scene when neighbors saw the fire. The Smiths were working at the time of the incident.

The fire was started by an electric heater on the back porch destroying the rear of the building.

Placed on the porch around 6 a.m. the heater was keeping puppies in a box warm. The dogs were killed in the fire.

Sextuplets Progressing Satisfactorily

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The Rosenkowitz sextuplets are responding satisfactorily to phototherapy treatment for jaundice, doctors at Mowbray Maternity Hospital say.

The three boys and three girls born Friday to Susan Rosenkowitz developed jaundice on Sunday, but their doctors said this had been expected and the condition should be cleared up by Wednesday.

"All six babies show satisfactory progress," said a bulletin Sunday night. "Their levels of jaundice remain well controlled and they are active."

"They yawn, cry and stretch their arms and legs when not sleeping. Their mother handled all her babies in their incubators when she visited them this morning."

Mrs. Rosenkowitz carried the babies for a full nine-month pregnancy. The babies were delivered by Caesarian section and weighed a total of 22.3 pounds. In order of delivery they were a boy at 4.4 pounds; a girl, 2.7; a boy, 4.6; a girl, 3; a boy, 4.1; a girl, 3.5.

The phototherapy to which they are being subjected consists of exposure to strong lights mounted over their incubators. The light breaks down the jaundice pigment in the babies' skin, and they excrete it.

"This form of treatment will be necessary for two to three days," the statement said. "During this stage the babies' eyes are covered to protect them from the intense light."

Ninety-five per cent of man's technological achievements are estimated to have been made in the last 25 years.

Henley, who was only 14 when the killings started, is charged in six murder indictments returned by a Harris County grand jury. His trial opens today.

State District Judge William M. Hatten has reserved the opening days for pretrial motions. The hardest fought ones are expected to be motions by defense lawyer Will Gray, 48, to exclude from evidence oral and written confessions Henley made to police.

Charles Melder, 44, who heads the defense team of lawyers, says: "We'll proceed on the assumption the boy was without counsel at the time, and wasn't adequately warned of his rights."

Without the Henley statements the state's case could be seriously weakened, prosecution lawyers say.

The prosecution says there is only one other witness to the killings: David Owen Brooks, 18, himself charged with four murders. Brooks, due to be tried beginning March 4, will not testify at the Henley trial. Such testimony would incriminate him, even though he has given a statement linking Henley to at least seven deaths, prosecutors say. The U.S. Constitution allows a person to refrain from giving self-incriminating testimony.

Dean Arnold Corll, 33, the man police call the mastermind of the ring, was shot dead by Henley. It was Henley's shooting of Corll during a sex and paint-sniffing party last Aug. 8 which broke open the case.

After the shooting, later ruled self-defense, police say Henley began telling them about the series of murders. At first they were incredulous, but soon they found Henley was telling them the truth. He and Brooks led them to 27 buried bodies in three locations.

Henley has been indicted in six of the murders but is being tried for only one of them now: the death of Charles Ray Cobble, 17.

Cobble, who lived across the street from Henley in the fading Heights neighborhood close to downtown Houston, was found dead two weeks after he disappeared, buried along with 16 other youths in a boat stall rented by Corll.

Melder says he does not plan to ask for a change of venue, despite the massive publicity. He also has said in court that he plans to "raise insanity at the time of the offense as a defense."

Judge Hatten has estimated pretrial arguments over motions could take between three days and two weeks. Then comes jury selection, which Hatten said could last from one to four weeks.

The jury will be locked up for the duration of the trial.

Tunisia-Libya Merger Slated

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After five unsuccessful attempts in 16 years to unite some of the Arab countries, the new match of oil-rich Libya and poor Tunisia is being greeted with skepticism.

Lebanese newspapers suggested that Col. Moammar Khadafi, the militant Libyan leader, had turned to Tunisia's moderate President Habib Bourguiba out of pique at the failure of his attempt last year to merge with Egypt.

Bourguiba presumably hopes his country — with twice as many people and one-tenth the area — will benefit from Libya's enormous oil revenue.

Algeria's official news agency, APS, declared that unity of two peoples can only be based "on concrete realities and similar options in all fields" and not on "one single decree, however grandiloquent." This was a pointed rebuff to a statement from Bourguiba expressing hope that Algeria would join the union.

Khadafi and Bourguiba signed an agreement Saturday to unite their countries into a new state to be called the Arab Islamic Republic, with a single executive, legislature, army, flag and constitution. The merger will be submitted to a referendum, and approval is considered certain.

But the Libyan and Tunisian governments are dominated by their two leaders, and the two men appear to have significantly more differences than similarities.

Bourguiba, for example, has been the only Arab leader to call openly for recognition of Israel and negotiations with the Jewish state provided it withdraws from all occupied Arab territories. Khadafi continues to reject negotiations and calls for a holy war and liquidation of Israel.

Bourguiba at 70 is one of the West's best friends in the Arab world and hospitable to both Western influence and aid in his country. Khadafi at 31 is a fiery Islamic nationalist who has tried to expel foreign influence from his country and calls for the rest of the Arabs to do the same.

Last summer, Bourguiba was strongly critical of Libya, saying "some Libyans still live in the Stone Age" and the country should develop its technology before thinking of union with other countries.

But Tunisia has a population of 5.1 million, an area of only 63,000 square miles, few resources, much unemployment and a sizable trade deficit. Libya has 2.1 million people, 10 times Tunisia's area and a per capita income of $1,700 a year and rising all the time thanks to its oil production.

This is Bourguiba's first flirtation with Arab unity.

In 1958, Egypt and Syria tried federation, and so did Jordan and Iraq. Both collapsed. A 1970 alliance of Egypt, Libya and the Sudan never got off the ground. The same three countries plus Syria tried a loose union in 1972 with no success. And last year Libya and Egypt announced a merger, but Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has held back.

Kentucky Rules Changes Pushed

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Democratic and Republican state senators were scheduled to caucus today prior to the start of the regular Senate session to discuss rules changes that could affect the operation of their powerful Rules Committee.

The Rules Committee is made up of the leadership of both parties and it controls the flow of bills from the committee to the Senate floor. A rules change in a resolution that must be adopted by the Senate provides that the Rules Committee can hold bills no longer than five days.

Present rules allow the committee, if it wants, to hold a bill indefinitely, so that it never gets to the Senate floor for action.

Fire Causes $9500 Damage

A fire, 7:08 a.m. Monday at the Bernard E. Smith residence, 327 E. Union St., caused an estimated $9500 to the building and $3,000 to the contents.

The Circleville Fire Department was dispatched to the scene when neighbors saw the fire. The Smiths were working at the time of the incident.

The fire was started by an electric heater on the back porch destroying the rear of the building.

Placed on the porch around 6 a.m. the heater was keeping puppies in a box warm. The dogs were killed in the fire.

Sextuplets Progressing Satisfactorily

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The Rosenkowitz sextuplets are responding satisfactorily to phototherapy treatment for jaundice, doctors at Mowbray Maternity Hospital say.

The three boys and three girls born Friday to Susan Rosenkowitz developed jaundice on Sunday, but their doctors said this had been expected and the condition should be cleared up by Wednesday.

"All six babies show satisfactory progress," said a bulletin Sunday night. "Their levels of jaundice remain well controlled and they are active."

"They yawn, cry and stretch their arms and legs when not sleeping. Their mother handled all her babies in their incubators when she visited them this morning."

Mrs. Rosenkowitz carried the babies for a full nine-month pregnancy. The babies were delivered by Caesarian section and weighed a total of 22.3 pounds. In order of delivery they were a boy at 4.4 pounds; a girl, 2.7; a boy, 4.6; a girl, 3; a boy, 4.1; a girl, 3.5.

The phototherapy to which they are being subjected consists of exposure to strong lights mounted over their incubators. The light breaks down the jaundice pigment in the babies' skin, and they excrete it.

"This form of treatment will be necessary for two to three days," the statement said. "During this stage the babies' eyes are covered to protect them from the intense light."

Ninety-five per cent of man's technological achievements are estimated to have been made in the last 25 years.

Deny Conflict Of Interest

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A recently-resigned member of the Ohio Building Authority has denied a conflict of interest existed when the authority purchased furniture from a company his law firm counsels.

Columbus attorney Melvin Schottenstein said his relationship with the furniture company was known before the authority voted on the acquisition. He said he asked the commission to include his relationship in the minutes of a meeting.

Also, Schottenstein said he planned to abstain from voting when the issue arose, but was absent when the actual poll was taken.

The furniture company was the sole bidder, an authority official said.

Schottenstein said his resignation was the result of a new state ethics law, not the conflict of interest charge.

of whatever we would have spent for a gift, and on each check we wrote, "Please sign this over to your favorite charity. Holiday cheer to you!"

There are so many worthwhile charities, why spoil the holiday fretting and shopping for unneeded gifts for people who are doing the same for us? We submit this idea in the hope that it will appeal to grownups who want to double their giving.

Abby, since you are probably among those who have everything, please accept the enclosed check for your favorite charity as our gift to you. God bless you and yours.

EUGENE F. MEGYESY, TULSA

DEAR MR. MEGYESY: What a super idea! Too bad it arrived too late to be used this Christmas, but I shall certainly share your novel and generous gift idea with my readers for next Christmas.

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column that there's a place in Hollywood that sells false fannies for women.

Do you know if they have any for men? All the pants I buy are always too big in the seat and I have to have a lot of alteration.

FANNYLESS IN FLORIDA

DEAR FANNYLESS: A "false fanny" is simply a padded girdle, and I'm sure it doesn't care who wears it.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the mother of the 16-year-old girl who had gone to a doctor requesting birth control pills. The mother was shocked and upset.

Obviously the girl expected her visit to be confidential but the moment she left the doctor's office he was on the phone, reporting to the girl's mother.

Abby, even minors have some rights. Some states have laws permitting minors to receive birth control pills without parental consent, while others do not. If this doctor was unwilling or unable to comply with the girl's request, he should have told her so and sent her on her way. To tattle to her mother was a gross violation of professional ethics.

If a patient sees a doctor about a drinking problem an ethical doctor does not notify the patient's employer. Neither does an ethical doctor contact the wife of an unfaithful husband (other than through public health officials) to report his case of V.D.

I hope that girl will report the physician's betrayal to her medical society. I would expect the same were I to violate medical ethics.

SAN FRANCISCO PHYSICIAN

DEAR PHYSICIAN: I received a load of letters from other physicians who share your view. I appreciate your writing.

Snuff Use, Tobacco Chewing Plagues School In Texas

COPPERAS COVE, Tex. (AP) — The old fashioned habit of snuff dipping has become the rage among some high schoolers here, and the authorities don't like it.

This is not the effete Old English habit of opening a silver snuff box, taking a pinch and delicately sniffing it.

This is the pioneer and Deep South procedure of pulling out the lower lip, shaking in a generous portion of tobacco, closing the lip and letting it seep around.

The problem is that snuff begins to make the mouth water. Sometime or other, the user must discharge the overflow or drown.

If a pupil was in a corridor, there went a new brown splotch on the floor.

Sidewalks took on a speckled look.

The youngsters solved the issue at such affairs as basketball games by using paper cups as spittoons and then leaving them.

"It wasn't sanitary," said Copperas Cove school principal Glynn Powell. "It's just a fad. Mostly cowboy types doing it."

The school trustees, spittin' mad, so to speak, took action this week. There won't be any more snuff dipping or tobacco chewing in school, they decreed.

Tobacco chewing? "A few chew," said Powell. He estimated 50 boys use snuff or chewing tobacco in the 1,200-pupil school. Then he thought a minute and raised the number to 65.

Any actually dipping in class? "Oh, we've had a few kids coming to class with a jaw or a lip full," said the principal.

Have the girls taken up the habit as did their pioneer great-grandmothers? "I've heard of it, but I haven't seen any of it around here," Powell said.

It seems that the new snuff dippers have added a new twist that probably would make an old time dipper ill.

"It's not powdered stuff like that Garrett snuff. It's a moist powder," Powell said.

"And this new stuff is sweet, and it comes in flavors like wintergreen and raspberry and two or three others."

Its precise ensemble, its extraordinary dynamic range as well as subtlety, and its impressive repertory of masterworks are but a few factors which invariably inspired superlatives from the press and the public.

Muenchinger, who founded the orchestra in 1945, has been acclaimed as a jeweler in music because of the pains he takes and for the love he shows for details, for precision and clarity of line and form.

Canadian Reform Moves

Echoes of political campaign abuses in the United States are reverberating through the halls of Canada's parliament. After years of study and discussion, a campaign reform act is well on the way toward becoming law.

One version, passed by the House of Commons with only 10 dissenting votes, would solve some of the problems which have surfaced in the United States as well, if enforced. All contributions over $100 would be fully disclosed. Spending in national campaigns would be limited to 30 cents for each registered voter per party.

Part of the outlay would be met by the government. In local campaigns expenditures also would be limited, based again on the number of voters in the district. Free broadcasts would be provided national candidates.

Campaign spending in Canada until now has been subject to fewer controls than in the United States, but Canadian law-makers are taking the lead in producing campaign reforms.

NEW YORK.—If you're going to Hawaii for the first or the thousandth time, you're some kind of a nut unless you read the latest and last, alas, of Richard Tregaskis' books, "The Warrior King—Kamehameha the Great." It is published by Macmillan, costs ten bucks, and that's dirt cheap considering the years of research the late great war correspondent expended on the life and times of a ruler of an eventual U.S. state who had little in common with, say, William Penn, founder of another.

Even if you have no intention of ever going to the enchanted 50th state of the United States (God save you from such oversight!), the story and legend of Kamehameha, an unmoral Superman, should interest you. To put him together in words, Tregaskis has to call on his knowledge of exploration, anthropology, primitive Polynesian warfare, invasions, (Dick wrote the immortal "Guadalcanal Diary") and perhaps Jacqueline Susann.

Only Tregaskis, the most patient (as well as the bravest) of newsmen, could have unraveled the unbelievable complex family trees of Kamehameha and other characters involved in "The Warrior King." The genealogies were made particularly difficult because incest among the Polynesians, who settled the enchanted islands from God only really knows where, was not only common but demanded.

The ideal royal married couple were brother and sister. The closer the family relationship in affairs of the heart, the more desirable. Kamehameha was lauded because his first affair, when he was 15 years old, was with his aunt, who was also his stepmother.

The liaison resulted in a son who was always recognized by Kamehameha but never given any status, and was never a part of his life except on battlefields—where Kamehameha spent much of his life uniting the islands. Kamehameha had 21 wives, more than 50 known children, and an incalculable number of affairs. Only two of the wives play any part in Tregaskis' study.

The first was a huge, lusty woman named Kaahumanu, confidante through most of his life. The fact that both had dozens of lovers on the side bothered them not in the least. Only once did Kamehameha become jealous enough of one of his queen's lovers to have the hapless fellow killed. That was when Kaahumanu was in her 40s and had an affair with her 19-year-old ward.

The great warrior's second favorite wife was his "sacred" spouse, Keopuolani. Kamehameha married her when she was 15 and he was approaching the half-century mark. It was necessary if he were to be wholly acceptable as of royal blood, for she was of a paler and, presumably, royal Polynesian strain. She bore him 11 children; three lived. Their first son, Liholiho, became Kamehameha II (but with Queen Kaahumanu rather than Keopuolani as regent).

Tregaskis' account of the ill-starred "discovery" of the islands by Captain James Cook in 1778, and Cook's gruesome end, would have been grist for DeMille, Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and MGM (before everybody died and MGM became a $104,000,000 hotel in Las Vegas). Cook and his adventurous crewmen aboard "Resolution" and "Discovery" were the first "haoles" (foreigners) the Hawaiians and their enormous chief, Kamehameha, had ever seen. The Hawaiians were delighted and greeted them as friendly gods from some other planet.

They naturally assumed the visiting gods would not resent their taking of small things, such as nails, tools, clothing and even one of Captain Cook's cutters. Cook took three boats of sailors with muskets to try to retrieve it. A hand-to-hand battle ensued. Cook, who had gone ashore confidently with ten marines, was attacked by a mob of perhaps 3,000. He who had done so much in that part of the world, including a splendid study of the transit of Venus made in Tahiti, was stomped, beaten and stabbed to death. The British Admiralty, learning of this in the course of the next year, sent ships to recover his body. The party discovered that most of it had been eaten by Kamehameha and his

No more than one out of 10 American husbands knows the size of dress his wife wears. At least one out of five husbands can't name for certain his own shoe size or the length of his shirt sleeves.

No matter how much you may respect a man's ability as a raconteur, it begins to diminish if you meet him at more than three cocktail parties in a month.

One of the hardest of all things for a man to do is to win a deserved reputation as both a lover and an excellent executive in a single lifetime. That is why people who try to lead double lives find they are shirking one of them.

To convince a cynic that miracles are not only possible but commonplace in this world, simply let him watch a hen lay an egg.

When people speak of "the balance of nature," what they really mean is a time when nature is balanced so as to give the human race its next possible edge.

A debunker is successful only as long as he sticks to debunking things most people no longer believe or think important. But as soon as he starts debunking the comfortable myths they

Before the advent of the trading ships and the missionaries, Hawaiians worshiped idols, were completely devoid of what the white man called morals, and were kapu-ridden. (Kapus are superstition-based customs). After Kamehameha's death in 1819, Queens Kaahumanu and Keopuolani pressured Kamehameha II to abolish some of those kapus. The first kapu junked was the one forbidding women to eat with men, it and the conversion to Christianity of Queen Kaahumanu helped make easier the incursion of the missionaries who did so much to improve the nature of Hawaii, and of their own fortunes.

It was said of the early missionaries, "They came to do good, and remained to do well." Their descendants have been doing ever better, selling some of their precious lands and beaches to the Japanese who once thought they could take the islands by force and discovered, a generation later, that it was cheaper to buy them.

Safecrackers entered two Circleville business houses and escaped with an estimated $2,000 in cash checks and tools.

Employees at Pickaway County Farm Bureau and Beckett Implement Co. discovered their safes rifled and papers strewn over the floor when they reported to work.

NEW YORK (AP) — The perennial frustration of accountants has been the difficulty of communicating their message to a population which is educated to read and understand words, but which tends to distrust numbers.

Since numbers are the vocabulary of accountants the situation is a difficult one, made more so today by demands for more complete corporate information and by the growing complexities of those corporations.

In addition, pressures are developing for accountants to measure social assets, even though the criteria for appraising them is incomplete. And while they are preoccupied with these problems, inflation is scrambling the numbers.

The current state of flux provoked John C. Burton, the chief accountant of the Securities and Exchange Commission, to comment: "We have encouraged the public to think that financial statements are truth, and now we must teach them otherwise."

Burton didn't stop there. He expanded his remarks into a broad generalization: "You cannot find in accounting a truth. Most of the big accounting problems today are not susceptible to a simple answer."

Walter Hanson, senior partner of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell, puts it this way:

"What people are fooled by is that the numbers one, two, three add up, but when you apply them to what is happening in the corporate environment they become less exact."

You may say a building is worth $10,000, Hanson continues, and that it depreciates over 10 years, or $1,000 a year. But another accountant might say 12 years, another 9, and another 13.

The numbers are precise. You can add, subtract, divide and multiply them. But when you apply those numbers to a real situation the matter of judgment enters. Then, Hanson states, "Exactness disappears into inexactness."

The situation is compounded in dealing with today's corporate maze and is forcing the major accounting firms to seek more thoroughly educated beginners and to strengthen inhouse education.

"We're dealing with 60 hours per man of continuing formal education," said Hanson. Each year, he estimates, the firm devotes 50,000 man days to such additional instruction, tripling its education costs in three years.

Among the relatively newer problems are those created by persistent inflation. It makes comparisons misleading; the dollar values of today, for example, are really about 30 per cent lower than those of 10 years ago.

Comparisons made in current dollars therefore are misleading. The numbers look the same and they add up in the same way, but their values are decidedly different.

Kurfess Raps Gilligan Move

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (AP)—House Minority Leader Charles F. Kurfess has accused Gov. John Gilligan of "looking out for his own selfish political future nationally" by naming Howard Metzenbaum to the U. S. Senate.

Kurfess said Friday he had learned from a "reliable source" that Gilligan gave in to pressure by "national labor leaders" to name the Cleveland millionaire to the seat vacated by the appointment of William B. Saxbe as attorney general.

In an interview with a Bowling Green radio station, Kurfess said Gilligan had decided to appoint an unnamed third person to the seat, bypassing Metzenbaum and John Glenn, both announced candidates for the Senate nomination in the May primary.

"He had made his judgment to go to a third individual," Kurfess said, "but had to pull off of that from pressure from labor organizations—and interestingly enough, not from Ohio labor organizations but from national labor leaders."

Coin Tosses Decide Mayoralty Position

WEST JEFFERSON, Ohio (AP) — Three votes and two coin tosses sent West Jefferson Councilman John O'Donnell to be president pro tem. Three members of the six-member council wanted the job and all votes were even.

Why not a coin toss with the odd man winning? On the first toss, the trio had heads. On the second, O'Donnell won.

Now, O'Donnell may be mayor. The current mayor is seeking a seat on the county commission. If he wins, O'Donnell gets the mayor's spot.

Burton didn't stop there. He expanded his remarks into a broad generalization: "You cannot find in accounting a truth. Most of the big accounting problems today are not susceptible to a simple answer."

Walter Hanson, senior partner of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell, puts it this way: "What people are fooled by is that the numbers one, two, three add up, but when you apply them to what is happening in the corporate environment they become less exact."

You may say a building is worth $10,000, Hanson continues, and that it depreciates over 10 years, or $1,000 a year. But another accountant might say 12 years, another 9, and another 13. The numbers are precise. You can add, subtract, divide and multiply them. But when you apply those numbers to a real situation the matter of judgment enters. Then, Hanson states, "Exactness disappears into inexactness."

The situation is compounded in dealing with today's corporate maze and is forcing the major accounting firms to seek more thoroughly educated beginners and to strengthen in-house education.

"We're dealing with 60 hours per man of continuing formal education," said Hanson. Each year, he estimates, the firm devotes 50,000 man days to such additional instruction, tripling its education costs in three years.

Among the relatively newer problems are those created by persistent inflation. It makes comparisons misleading; the dollar values of today, for example, are really about 30 per cent lower than those of 10 years ago.

Comparisons made in current dollars therefore are misleading. The numbers look the same and they add up in the same way, but their values are decidedly different.

Kurfess Raps Gilligan Move

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (AP)—House Minority Leader Charles F. Kurfess has accused Gov. John Gilligan of "looking out for his own selfish political future nationally" by naming Howard Metzenbaum to the U. S. Senate.

Kurfess said Friday he had learned from a "reliable source" that Gilligan gave in to pressure by "national labor leaders" to name the Cleveland millionaire to the seat vacated by the appointment of William B. Saxbe as attorney general.

In an interview with a Bowling Green radio station, Kurfess said Gilligan had decided to appoint an unnamed third person to the seat, bypassing Metzenbaum and John Glenn, both announced candidates for the Senate nomination in the May primary.

"He had made his judgment to go to a third individual," Kurfess said, "but had to pull off of that from pressure from labor organizations—and interestingly enough, not from Ohio labor organizations but from national labor leaders."

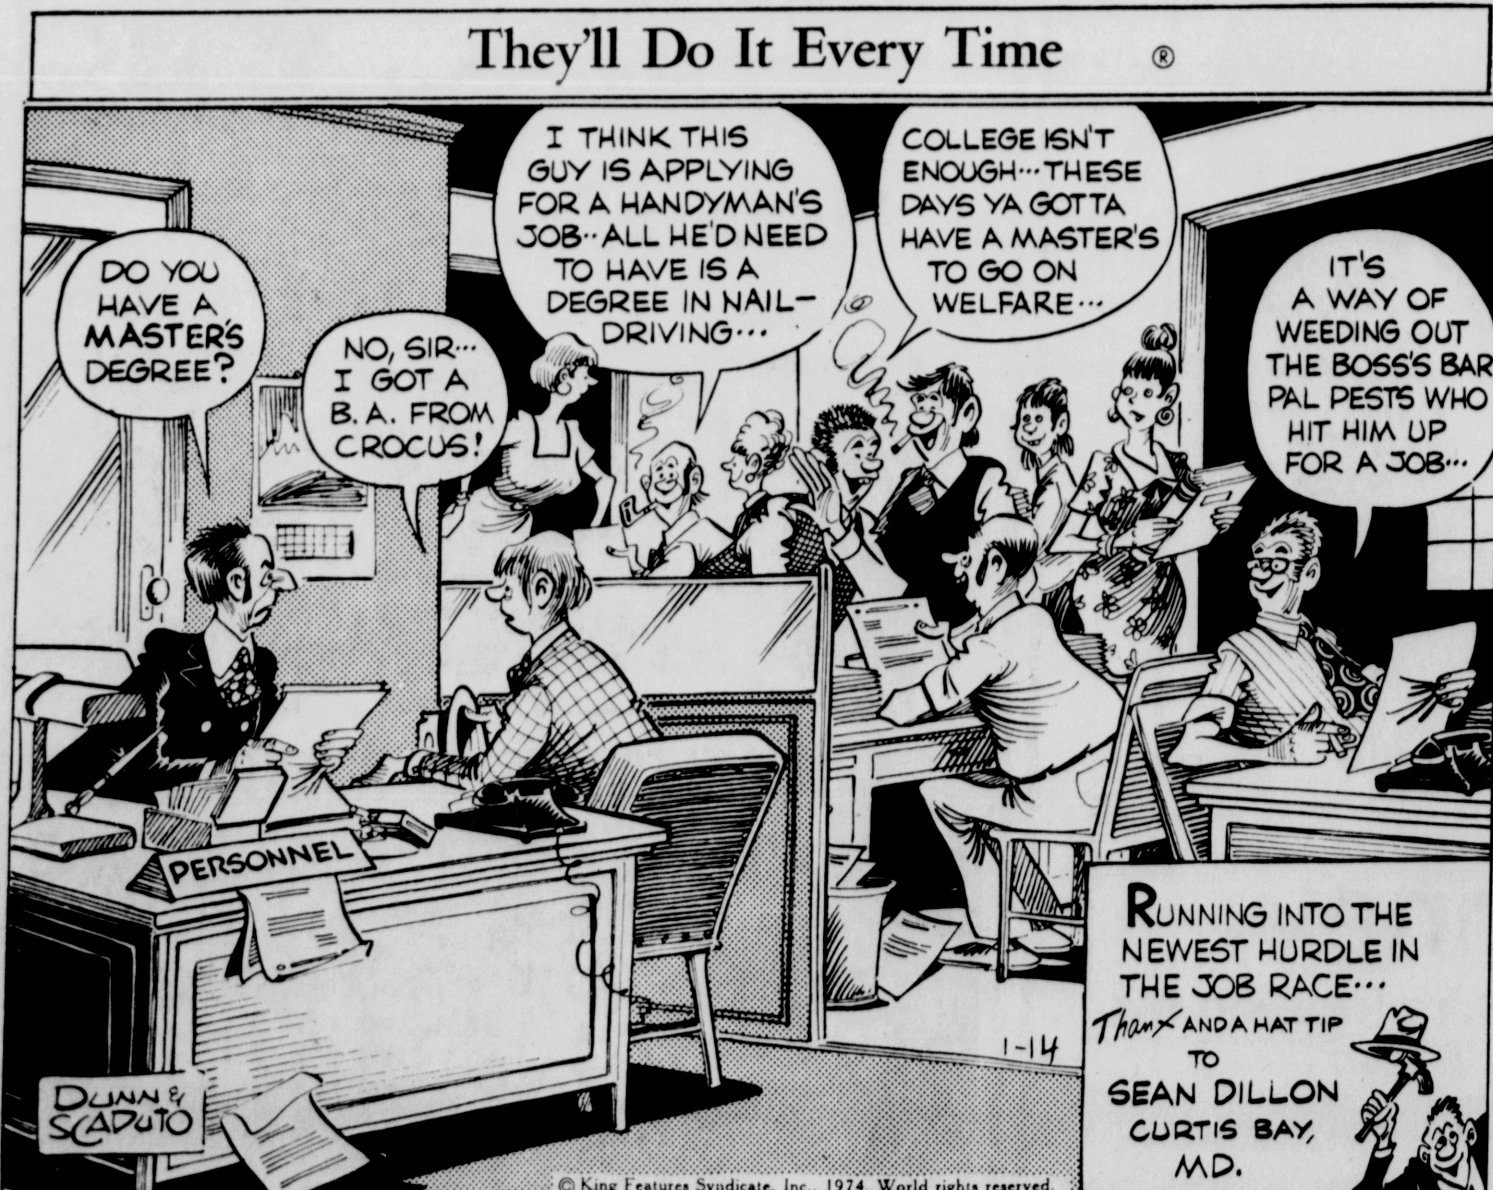

Coin Tosses Decide Mayoralty Position

WEST JEFFERSON, Ohio (AP) — Three votes and two coin tosses sent West Jefferson Councilman John O'Donnell to be president pro tem. Three members of the six-member council wanted the job and all votes were even.

Why not a coin toss with the odd man winning? On the first toss, the trio had heads. On the second, O'Donnell won.

Now, O'Donnell may be mayor. The current mayor is seeking a seat on the county commission. If he wins, O'Donnell gets the mayor's spot.

Auto Engineers Seek New Ground In Engines

DETROIT (AP) — The energy crisis has prompted auto makers to produce more small cars, but executives say no one is rushing to market a new, gasoline-saving engine to replace the conventional piston type.

General Motors, Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. say they spent $90 million in 1973 trying to find a system better than the piston engine.

Ford assigned 6,000 workers to explore various alternatives to the standard engine. And there were plenty of theories to investigate.

Said GM engineer William Agnew: "Since 1963, we have made technical reviews of over 300 alternate power proposals."

Many were set aside immediately because of obvious engineering flaws, but a number have been studied in depth, he said.

Nevertheless, a panel of scientists from the National Academy of Science chastized the auto industry last year for putting off engine research and development until forced to action by the 1970 Clean Air Act.

Three new engines being given priority by the auto industry are:

Wankel — Operates with a rotor which turns in a circular fashion, rather than the up-and-down motion of the piston-type engine. It is half as big, a third lighter and has fewer moving parts. Gas mileage, however, is a poor 10 to 12 miles to the gallon.

Turbine — Operates on the same principal as an airplane turboprop engine and sounds like one. Burns various fuels, usually a kerosene mixture, but has some emissions problems, industry engineers say.

Stratified Charge — Similar to a piston engine, but operates on three valves. A fuel-rich zone near the igniting spark plug means fuel burns cleanly and without waste. It is still being developed.

Three others are considered dark horses by the auto industry:

Stirling — An external burner heats a gas, usually hydrogen, sealed inside the engine. Expanding gas drives the pistons. Experimental Stirlings have turned out to be quiet, clean and economical. A very large radiator is needed to cool the hot gas.

Electric — Operates on batteries, but auto company engineers say they are unable to build a car with adequate speed and range.

Steam — Operates on various fuels to heat water which in turn drives a piston to create power. Same external combustion engine as a locomotive uses. Heavy and bulky engine causes design problem.

Chrysler has been trying to work the kinks out of steam engines for 25 years," company spokesmen say.

"Our work has indicated that an automotive steam engine would be bulky, heavy and, as a system, up to twice as expensive as the internal combustion engine," said George Huebner, director of Chrysler's engineering research.

Wankel engines are another story. Citroen, Mazda and Spyder have rotary-powered cars on the road. Twenty-six others have signed agreements so they can use the rotary-type engine.

GM committed $50 million in 1970 for the right to use the Wankel and announced plans to put the new engine in the 1975-model Chevrolet Vega.

But GM now is hedging its target date because of what the company describes as problems with fuel economy and emission levels. For similar reasons, Henry Ford II said Wankel was X-rated at his firm. "X means out, cross it out," he said.

The Environmental Protection Agency — EPA — tested three Mazdas and said on Sept. 18 that they delivered 10.6 to 10.8 miles per gallon, lowest in their 2,750-pound weight class and equal to the mileage of a 4,500-pound Ford.

But the Mazda passed EPA anti-pollution standards.

Honda of Japan recently announced a stratified charge concept.

EPA in October tested a 5,000-pound Chevrolet Impala with a V8 engine modified to Honda's stratified charge design. The engine met pollution standards without the use of emission control devices.

It also averaged 10.4 miles a gallon of fuel, about one mile per gallon above the average for the class size.

"The stratified charge engine ... shows very good promise of lower emissions and better fuel economy," said Chrysler President John Riccardo. "We think we can have a third of our engines converted over to some form of stratified charge by the 1977 model year...."

A GM spokesman said GM had been working on such an engine since 1950, but added: "There's no point at this moment to talk about stratified charge engines until the government decides on what emission controls are necessary for them. The stratified charge engine introduces some new pollutants, the aldehydes and particulates, that currently are not controlled (but) are very reactive."

"We may find ourselves developing a new stratified charge engine that requires a catalyst," he said.

The turbine engine has been a pet project of Chrysler's for 25 years and the firm now is testing its seventh version of the engine under a $2 million contract with the federal government.

Fifty prototypes have been built, but the project is hung up on emission and noise problems.

"The turbine cannot meet the nitrous oxide — NOX — standards," said Chrysler's Riccardo of the air pollution problem. "It meets the hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide (standards) and burns those things like crazy, but when you burn that stuff up, you create NOX."

"So until the turbine can qualify, or the law is changed, we cannot do much with the turbine," he said.

Auto executives said they objected to the electric engine because of its lack of range and speed.

They also said emissions of sulfur dioxide would pour from the engine as the car zipped quietly down the road.

Ford is one of the leading supporters of the Stirling engine.

Ford and United Stirling of Sweden plan to use the engine in a current automobile body. But experts say it needs a very large radiator to recycle the hot hydrogen gas for reuse.

Manufacturing costs and maintenance are two unanswered questions for the Stirling.

Rookie Policeman Appeals Discipline

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Rookie policeman Donald D. Hudson, 24, Friday appealed a disciplinary decision by Police Chief Carl Goodin in a suit in Hamilton County Common Pleas Court.

Hudson said the chief ordered him to take off three days because he refused to have his hair cut.

Ohio Crucial In Passage Of Amendment

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Journalist Liz Carpenter says Ohio is where the action is when it comes to the Equal Rights Amendment.

The former press secretary to Lady Bird Johnson said the passage of the ERA in Ohio will insure passage in the rest of the country.

Mrs. Carpenter made the prediction Saturday in an appearance at a statewide rally of the Ohio Coalition for the Equal Rights Amendment held at Capital University.

During the day-long conference rally, Ohio AFL-CIO President Frank W. King joined Mrs. Carpenter and Gov. John Gilligan at a news conference supporting the amendment. Previously, King was one of the chief opponents of the measure designed to insure equal rights for women.

Last April the ERA was defeated in the Ohio Senate Elections Committee. This year, the bill will get another chance.

The measure still has to be passed by eight states before it becomes the law of the land.

King says he changed his position because the national AFL-CIO convention Oct. 22 reversed a previous stand and came out in favor of the ERA.

At the time the ERA was killed, King was credited with influencing two Democratic state senators to vote against it. But Saturday, the union leader said he would use his influence to help the amendment pass.

Gilligan pledged his continuing support of the measure as he spoke to the audience of 1,000. He said his administration believes "very strongly that the federal constitution should be amended and should include the equal rights amendment."

"I'd like to see Ohio be the 31st state to ratify," he said.

Sohio Planning Record Capital Expenditures

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Standard Oil Co. (Ohio) says it plans record capital expenditures of about $300 million this year, and that figure could go even higher if a start is made on the Trans-Alaskan Pipeline.

Sohio Chairman Charles Spahr said Sunday it is hoped the pipeline project will get under way in 1974 but noted that the seven oil companies involved still don't have the necessary federal permit.

Spahr said the planned capital expenditures also include $90 million for facilities needed for further development of Sohio's oil and gas reserves in the Prudhoe Bay field of Alaska's North Slope.

Another major item is $55 million as part of a two-step program to convert Sohio's Toledo refinery to handle high sulfur or "sour" crude oil. The initial phase will double the present sour crude capacity to 40,000 barrels a day.

New Vitamin "E" Plus "C" Diet Gives Fast Weight Loss

LOS ANGELES (Special) — New scientific discoveries have now produced a Vitamin E Plus "C" diet that quickly works wonders on overweight people, and reportedly is gaining great popularity across the country with glowing reports of easy weight loss "while still eating almost as much as you want."

Those who follow the simple Vitamin E diet report an average loss of at least a pound a day and even more without exercise or starvation. Nutritionists files are bulging with happy testimonies from formerly overweight people who are now trim and slim again. Make sure your registers and air vents are not covered or obstructed by furniture and drapes. Let the warm air circulate freely.

Keep your furnace filters clean to let the warm air flow freely. Replace filters at least twice during the heating season. Get your money's worth from your clean gas heat. Prices are going up all over. Don't waste money by wasting heat.

At night and on cloudy days, close the drapes to help keep the warm air in.

Don't heat the great outdoors. Keep opening and closing of outside doors to a minimum. Kids and pets are great travelers.

Kent State Jury Hears Student

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—A Kent State University student wounded by Ohio National Guard shots in 1970 told a federal grand jury Friday that he may have been shot intentionally.

Alan Canfora, 24, of Barberton, told newsmen a juror asked him whether he thought he was shot intentionally and that he replied "I don't know, but I don't rule out the possibility."

Canfora was one of nine students wounded by Ohio National Guard troops May 4, 1970, in a confrontation with students protesting military involvement in Cambodia. Four students were killed.

Seven of the wounded students were questioned Friday by the 23-member grand jury. Two others—Dean Kahler, 23, a junior at Kent State and Joseph Lewis Jr., 22, of Massillon—told newsmen they were instructed to return Monday for questioning.

The grand jury recessed for the weekend following the Friday session.

Others testifying were Donald S. MacKenzie, 25, of Richborn, Pa.; James D. Russell, 26, of Hampstead, Md.; Robert F. Stamps, 23, of Cleveland; John R. Cleary, 22, of Scotia, N.Y.; Thomas Grace, 23, of Syracuse, N.Y., and Douglas A. Wrentmore, 24, of Hiram.

Canfora refused to answer other questions from newsmen about his appearance before the panel, as did the others.

Lewis and Canfora were among the 25 persons indicted by a special state grand jury called by then-Gov. James A. Rhodes in the fall of 1970 to investigate the shootings. Both were charged with second degree riot, but neither was brought to trial.

Other witnesses have told newsmen the jury questioned them about a variety of possibilities as to what sparked the volley of shots, including that the guardsmen were ordered to fire, that the guardsmen were in danger from students throwing chunks of concrete and other objects, that there was a surge of students toward the guardsmen, that the gunfire was arranged by plan or that the shooting erupted spontaneously.

Michael Delaney, a former public information spokesman for the guard, said he told the jurors Monday that the gunfire was the result of possible collusion or a spontaneous incident but that he didn't believe self-defense was a factor.

Steel Production Continues Heavy

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)— The price of steelmaking scrap fell a second week in a row, but the demand for steel continued to soar and production was expected to stay at its record pace, Industry Week says.

The magazine said in today's edition that 1973's raw steel output hit 150.5 million tons, a record, and that December's output totaled 12.7 million tons, also a record.

The estimated production of raw steel in the week which ended last Friday again was a record, 2.88 million tons, climbing from what had been the weekly record of 2.84 million tons set the week before.

Arita McNeal said a prayer and members sang "Send The Light." For devotions Alice Dean read from Hebrews 12:14, a reading and prayer. "Amazing Grace" was sung and Joyce Nansel gave the blessing to close the meeting. Refreshments were served by the hostess to 15 members and two guests.

The next meeting will be held Feb. 12th in the church basement.

Historical Society Plans Annual Dinner, Election

Pickaway County Historical Society will hold its annual covered-dish dinner meeting and election of 1974 officers 6:30 p.m., Jan. 17th, in the Parish House of St. Philip's Episcopal Church, 129 W. Mound St., Circleville.

Kent State Jury Hears Student

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—A Kent State University student wounded by Ohio National Guard shots in 1970 told a federal grand jury Friday that he may have been shot intentionally.

Alan Canfora, 24, of Barberton, told newsmen a juror asked him whether he thought he was shot intentionally and that he replied "I don't know, but I don't rule out the possibility."

Canfora was one of nine students wounded by Ohio National Guard troops May 4, 1970, in a confrontation with students protesting military involvement in Cambodia. Four students were killed.

Seven of the wounded students were questioned Friday by the 23-member grand jury. Two others—Dean Kahler, 23, a junior at Kent State and Joseph Lewis Jr., 22, of Massillon—told newsmen they were instructed to return Monday for questioning.

The grand jury recessed for the weekend following the Friday session.

Others testifying were Donald S. MacKenzie, 25, of Richborn, Pa.; James D. Russell, 26, of Hampstead, Md.; Robert F. Stamps, 23, of Cleveland; John R. Cleary, 22, of Scotia, N.Y.; Thomas Grace, 23, of Syracuse, N.Y.; and Douglas A. Wrentmore, 24, of Hiram.

Canfora refused to answer other questions from newsmen about his appearance before the panel, as did the others.

Lewis and Canfora were among the 25 persons indicted by a special state grand jury called by then-Gov. James A. Rhodes in the fall of 1970 to investigate the shootings. Both were charged with second degree riot, but neither was brought to trial.

Other witnesses have told newsmen the jury questioned them about a variety of possibilities as to what sparked the volley of shots, including that the guardsmen were ordered to fire, that the guardsmen were in danger from students throwing chunks of concrete and other objects, that there was a surge of students toward the guardsmen, that the gunfire was arranged by plan or that the shooting erupted spontaneously.

Michael Delaney, a former public information spokesman for the guard, said he told the jurors Monday that the gunfire was the result of possible collusion or a spontaneous incident but that he didn't believe self-defense was a factor.

Steel Production Continues Heavy

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)— The price of steelmaking scrap fell a second week in a row, but the demand for steel continued to soar and production was expected to stay at its record pace, Industry Week says.

The magazine said in today's edition that 1973's raw steel output hit 150.5 million tons, a record, and that December's output totaled 12.7 million tons, also a record.

The estimated production of raw steel in the week which ended last Friday again was a record, 2.88 million tons, climbing from what had been the weekly record of 2.84 million tons set the week before.

Next time you serve chili con carne at a party, accompany it with a bowl of grated cheddar cheese, one of chopped sweet onion and one of yogurt. Let eaters help themselves to the topping or toppings they prefer.

On Tuesday the jury scrutinized scores of pictures of the incident taken by photographers who told newsmen the jurors apparently were trying to determine the distance between the guardsmen and students when the shooting started.

Kahler, a social science major, was left paralyzed from the waist down by a bullet in the back that fractured three vertebrae. He was about 300 feet from guardsmen when shot.

He was a major figure in collecting 50,000 signatures on petitions calling for the federal grand jury probe, which former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell had refused in 1971. Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson ordered the investigation late last year, and the grand jury was convened Dec. 18.

Shoemaker Opposes Daylight Savings Time

Veteran legislator Myrl H. Shoemaker (D) from the 88th House District and chairman of the House Finance Committee in commenting on Governor Gilligan's decision against requesting that Ohio be exempted from DST declared his personal opposition to Ohio's adoption of daylight savings time.

47-Year News Career Ended By Glen Geib

Glen Geib, editor of The Herald from 1929 to 1944, has retired from newspaper work after 47 years, to become Farm Representative for The Fremont, Ohio, Savings Bank Co., an affiliate of Society Corporation of Cleveland.

In September of 1970 Geib relinquished his position as editor of the Fremont, Ohio, News-Messenger after nearly 26 years in that position. At that time he became an associate editor and Farm Editor, devoting most of his time to working with people, organizations and industries associated with agriculture. His retirement from the Fremont newspaper became effective last Dec. 31, his bank work starting Jan. 2 on a part-time basis.

Geib and his family came to Circleville from Dover, Ohio, in 1929 when the newspaper was owned by Arthur A. Hoopingarner. He remained in Circleville as editor under the Galvin Corporation's ownership for more than eight years before going to Fremont.

The veteran newspaperman and his wife, Nellie, live at 1525 Birchard Ave., Fremont. Mrs. Geib is a sister of Mrs. Robert (Dorothy) Shadley, E. Mound St.

Miller Attacks Court Decision On Safety Strikes

MADISON, W.Va. (AP) — United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller has criticized the U.S. Supreme Court decision in which UMW members were forbidden to strike over safety matters.

Miller, speaking at a UMW District 17 officers meeting Sunday, said, "No one in law is going to sit on their cans in Washington and tell members of the UMW that they have to work in unsafe conditions while arbitration is going on."

In an appeal opinion issued last week, the high court said that safety disputes must be submitted to arbitration, as stipulated in the 1971 national bituminous coal contract.

On another matter, Miller said he hopes to meet with industry representatives within a week to develop ground rules for this year's negotiations on a new national contract. The 1971 present contract expires in November.

Press Isn't Perfect

By JIM BISHOP

The press is not united. This is the great misapprehension that stains the country. There is an inbred suspicion that newspaper editors and the heads of television news departments arrange secret consultations to agree on who should be destroyed by the printed and oral word today.

I will not defend the press, because freedom to print and say may be the only safeguard in America against a fascist state. It's the snarling watchdog, sniffing, probing, digging for hidden crime in high places. When the errant son of a big advertiser is nabbed for drunken driving, the men on the city desk gulp. If they publish it, daddy may withdraw his ads. If they don't, the competition will publish the story.

Frequently, readers ask if there is anyone I dislike. This, by animadversion, indicates that I center my stories on people I admire. Years ago, James Knight of the Knight Newspapers said: "Jim Bishop doesn't offend people." It was low praise indeed.

All newspapers are perpetually pitted against all others. The nature of the business is to get it first and get it right. It doesn't matter who is involved, or what. A reporter may have three hours in which to get an assignment from his boss, rush out to research it and write it at a length suitable to the city desk.

Are newspapers and the gentlemen who read the news on television ever wrong? Everyday. No one has ever managed to assemble 200 separate stories and get them all right. Often, the personal bias of the reporter or commentator creeps into the copy. Sadly, they are not gods. They are working stiffs.

Example: Jimmy Cannon and I were friends. We started as copy boys on The New York Daily News. He died a few weeks ago. In 40 years, we never agreed. He carved his phrases and polished them, but I had to read five paragraphs to find out what the hell sport he was writing about.

He would kill a man to use a good phrase. He found out that Emil Grif-fith, a good fighter, made women's hats as a hobby. Cannon called him a "swish hitter." He asked what I thought of it. I held my nose.

On TV I get along well with Howard Cosell. At ABC, he worked the sports desk while I did a daily program on the Eichmann trial. And yet he is one of the "cubs" who forms an opinion before he understands the subject.

For 13 years, I worked in an office adjoining Walter Winchell's. He was earning $1,000 a week to my $45. Walter assured me that he could make or break anybody, including the President. What he could break—and did—was his family. When he was buried, one of the most famous men in America had two mourners, a daughter and a rabbi. The girl sent the rabbi away.

Gore Vidal wrote a book called "Burr." In the manner of those other eminent writers, Norman Mailer and Truman Capote, they tire of research and fill the blanks with what they think may have happened. The insult to the reading public is deepened when these fiction-fact books are referred to as "a new art form."

I do not appreciate these "writers." James Kilpatrick, a columnist, has spent a lot of time telling the Supreme Court when its decisions were wrong or right. Between times, he treated readers to dissertations on why Richard Nixon was a fine President.

After all these years, he has deserted Nixon. If nothing else, this places in sharp focus the human weaknesses of the media. It isn't a plot; it isn't collusion; it's frailty.

Westbrook Pegler peddled venom. When he was hungry for an idea, he resurrected Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt from her grave and flogged the skeleton. In California, he said accusingly: "How come they print what you write? When I sit at a typewriter, I have three lawyers looking over my shoulder." I shrugged: "I never blew a $175,000 libel suit."

Damon Runyon was a superior writer, but he wore a monumental ego bigger than his hat. He whiled away hours with Winchell in a car arguing about which would get the bigger headline if both died on the same day.

I cite these items to show that the media is so busy fighting itself I marvel that it has time to probe the sins of others. Arthur Brisbane was the highest paid columnist I knew, but he imported two women woodchoppers from the State of Washington—each six feet of muscle and jaw—to chop a tree, and wrote: "Any red-blooded American would be proud to marry either of these ladies."

I threw up on his column. A city editor assigned me to join a nudist colony because he thought it was a sex factory. It wasn't. When I told him, he said: "Write it." So I wrote about

"I would favor any attempt on the part of the governor or the legislators that would exempt our state from this program designed to conserve energy in the current national crisis", Shoemaker said.

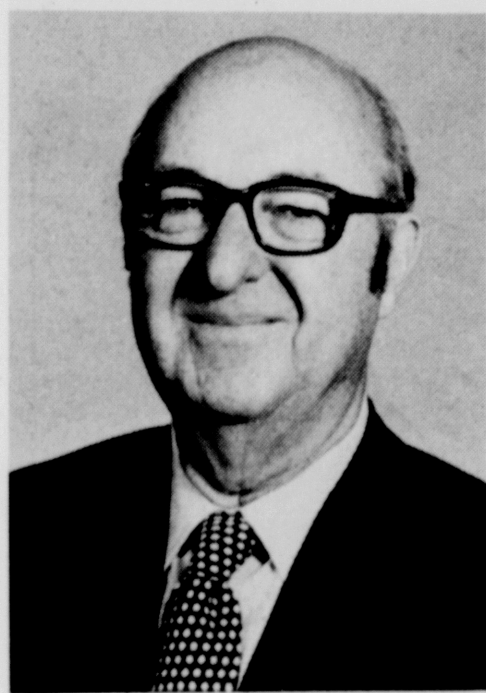

A basic reason behind Shoemaker's pronouncement is his deep and abiding concern for the safety of small children who would be riding buses and walking to school often some two hours before daylight. He stated, "for the anticipated small, or in-consequential saving of energy, the gamble with young lives is too great for an unknown result."

"With parents throughout the state expressing great concern and many now driving children to school, I wonder how much energy we are really saving?" he said. "It seems to me that DST, instituted to save energy is working against the energy crisis and disrupting thousands of homes, particularly where there are working parents", Shoemaker added.

Representative Shoemaker pointed out that Ohio is one of the greatest producers of electricity, and utility executives in our state declare that it is doubtful if in fact a shortage exists. Indeed, on December 7, in a meeting before a state Senate committee, it was announced by a representative of a large utility that electric utilities expect no problem in meeting the demand for electricity this winter since 99 per cent of electricity is generated by coal of which Ohio has an adequate supply.

In conclusion, Shoemaker urged the governor to reconsider and make a recommendation to Washington to terminate daylight savings time in Ohio "in order to guard the lives and secure the welfare of our children—a commodity too precious to gamble with".

Vikings Tame Tigers In County Battle

Teays Valley coasted to a 67-45 win over Circleville Saturday night behind the 21 point scoring effort of Craig Pontius before one of the largest crowds to ever pack the Vikings' gym.

Pontius tallied on drives and outside shooting with nine from the floor and three from the charity stripe to lead all scorers in the contest.

North Captures Senior Bowl Win

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner John Cappelletti turned into a deadly pass receiver in the Silver Anniversary Senior Bowl football game and sparked the North All-Stars to a 16-13 victory over the South.

"Cappelletti is class in every sense of the word," said North Coach Mike McCormack of the Philadelphia Eagles.

"He's a great player," said South Coach Don McCafferty of the Detroit Lions. "It's the outside linebacker's responsibility to cover the man coming out of the backfield on pass plays, but from the start to the end Cappelletti was wide open swinging out of the North backfield."

The Penn State All-American was held to only 48 yards rushing but he managed to grab eight passes for 153 yards, including a 16-yarder in the waning moments two plays before David Jaynes fired a 17-yard scoring strike to Lynn Swann for the game-winning score with only 26 seconds left. Jaynes, an All-American from Kansas, also hurled a 15-yarder to Swann, an All-American from Southern California, and a 12-yarder to Penn State's Gary Hayman in the 80-yard drive to victory.

The North, featuring some outstanding linemen, were favored in the game but appeared headed for defeat when Wilbur Jackson of Alabama raced 53 yards to the two setting up a two-yard scoring run by Arizona State's Woody Green. It gave the South a 13-9 lead in the fourth period.

The North had taken a 9-0 lead on a 31-yard field goal by Nebraska's Rich Sanger and a one-yard smash by Bo Matthews of Colorado after the game's most valuable player, defensive tackle Bill Kollar of Montana State, had pounced on a fumble.

The South rallied to the lead on field goals of 27 and 35 yards by Greg Gantt and on Green's two-yard run that came on a fourth down play.

Kollar, who won a 1974 car, said his performance was "probably a little bit above normal for me."

Dolphins Stifle Vikings, 24-7

HOUSTON (AP) — "If we're not the greatest football team that ever was, there never was one," crowed Miami Dolphin center Jim Langer. "I don't give a damn what Green Bay did."

The Dolphins, especially Larry Csonka, didn't care what the Minnesota Vikings did, either. Langer and his offensive linemates provided Csonka with mammoth holes Sunday, shoved the over-eager Vikings around at will, and steamrolled to a 24-7 Super Bowl victory.

On the rare occasions when the holes weren't there, Csonka made his own, carrying what looked like half of the Viking Purple gang with him.

And when the Rice Stadium field became nothing but a littered carpet, glistening with the first misty coat of an appropriate drizzle, the word "dynasty" was — not so subtly — back in the National Football League lexicon.

Like the Dolphins' 14-7 victory over Washington in Super Bowl VII a year ago, their thumping of Minnesota in Super Bowl VIII on Sunday was essentially a dull affair — but then, how do you root for General Motors?

That's what these Dolphins are, you know. A smooth, silent, assembly-line machine, unemotionally churning out yard after yard, touchdown after touchdown, championship after championship.

It was that way with the Green Bay Packers of the 1960s, too. That's the team everybody was talking about when the subject of a dynasty came up.

The Pack had won two Super Bowls in a row. Nobody else had done that — until Sunday. "I think now we can consider ourselves comparable to the Pack," said Csonka. "We had to reserve our opinion before the game, but not more."

Csonka is comparable to anything the Pack might have had in the Vince Lombardi days. He was more than anything the Vikings could handle.

Thirty-three times he carried the ball. Everybody in the joint knew he would. The only problem was, nobody could do anything about it.

"Our biggest reward," said Langer, the center of the Dolphins' bulldozer lines, "is to see Csonka going through for a big gain." Csonka did that a few times. He also went through — with help or on his own — for a lot of little gains, like Miami's first touchdown, a five-yard burst up the middle, and its last, a two-yarder on a basically busted play.

Jim Kiick, who once kicked around the league with Csonka as half of the "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" show before fading into the shadow of Mercury Morris' jitterbug act, scored the Dolphins' other touchdown — his first of the year — on a one-yard drive.

And Garo Yepremian — the Cypriot necktie maker and place-kicker whose participation last year in "So you want to be a quarterback" ended in a laughable disaster — stuck to his specialty this time around by booting a 28-yard field goal and three extra points.

A year ago, Yepremian's attempted pass on a busted field goal try would end up as Washington's only touchdown on a Mike Bass run with an interception.

The Vikes on the other hand, earned their only score. But, like the Redskins of 1973, they got it when the only thing it counted for was pride.

Fran Tarkenton, the Minnesota quarterback who once more probably will be assailed most undeservedly for his supposed inability to "win the big one," got that face-saving score on a four-yard run, the end of an 80-yard drive.

It was about the only time he really had the Vikes going. On the other occasion, when it might have really mattered, the Dolphins rose up en masse and fractured any hope of a rally that Minnesota might have nurtured.

By that time — the last minute of the first half — Miami already had scored two of its touchdowns and the field goal.

"They took the ball, went down the field and got 14 points the first two times they had the ball," said Bud Grant, the Vikings stoic coach. "That kind of a lead is hard to overcome against the good teams."

Minnesota made it to the Dolphins' six-yard line in that turning point final minute of the half.

Fourth down and a yard to go, the Vikes needed something. But they disdained the almost sure three points Fred Cox could've kicked for them. They went for the yard and the possible touchdown, but Nick Buoniconti, Miami's wily middle linebacker said "No way."

Oscar Reed slammed into the line. Buoniconti slammed into Reed. No gain, no score. No way.

Don Shula, the once tight-lipped coach — remember, he lost two Super Bowls before winning two — who loosened up so much that he had the midweek press in an uproar over his rendition of "Sex and the Single Football player," knew exactly what his Dolphins had to do when things got serious.

"Our whole objective against Fran was to catch, not chase," he said. "Today, we caught."

Miami caught the Vikings at everything they tried to do. Minnesota managed a measly 72 rushing yards. The 166 passing yards didn't matter one bit.

Bob Griese, the computer-like quarterback who had to resort to the pass only seven times — and completed six for 73 yards — said he "sensed almost immediately that Larry was running well. I just kept dialing his number."

He even dialed it when he had no idea what he was doing. In the third quarter with the Dolphins on the

Birdies Give Miller Victory In Phoenix Open

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Johnny Miller wined when he heard the gallery's vast roar from the 18th green that rolled and reverberated through the pines and palms dotting the Phoenix Country Club course.

"I said to myself, 'You've got to be kidding me. He couldn't have made eagle again,'" Miller said.

But there was no kidding about it. Lanny Wadkins had just rolled in a 30-foot putt for eagle three on the 18th hole and suddenly, from a four-stroke lead, Miller was one stroke behind with two holes to go.

He birdied both and was a winner — again.

Miller's four-under-par 67 in the final round gave him a 271 total, 13 under par on the 6,709 yard layout and a one-stroke margin over the disappointed Wadkins.

It was Miller's second victory in as many starts this year and made him the only champion the pro golf tour has seen this season. Actually, it was his third victory in a row. He won the individual title in the World Cup in Spain in his last 1973 start.

For Wadkins, who challenged with a sparkling, six-under-par 65, it marked the third year in a row that he had finished second in this tournament.

Veteran Miller Barber, who went into the warm, sunny final round in a tie for the top with Miller, fell back to a tie for third with a 70-274. Also at that figure were John Schroeder and Hubert Green, each of whom posted a 66 in the ideal playing conditions.

Australian Bruce Crampton, the 1973 Phoenix champion, had a closing 76 and was far back at 293. Lee Trevino

Arnsperger To Head New York Giants

HOUSTON (AP) — Bill Arnsperger, the top aide to Miami Dolphins head coach Don Shula, will take over as head coach of the New York Giants for the 1974 season, although he won't say so as yet.

"Arnsperger has the job — you can bet on that," a high-ranking official in the Miami organization said amidst the celebration in the Dolphins' locker room following Miami's 24-7 triumph over the Minnesota Vikings in Super Bowl VIII.

Ohio University Leads MAC League

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Bob Nichols admits Ohio University has a great start, but the Toledo coach is conceding nothing in the Mid-American basketball chase.

"Right now they certainly have things going their direction, momentum-wise, and that's important," said Nichols after the host Bobcats whipped Toledo 82-72 for the early MAC lead.

Sabres Blank Blues, 1-0

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Dave Dryden savored his first National Hockey League shutout this season — a 1-0 shutout at that.

"It's so much more satisfying than a 7-0 or 8-0 game," said Dryden after leading the Buffalo Sabres to victory over the St. Louis Blues Sunday night.

Minnesota twoyard line, Griese's mind suddenly went blank.

"I got to the line of scrimmage and started looking the defense over and forgot the count," he admitted.

"I turned around and asked Csonka. Why I did that, I don't know. He's always forgetting the count. Larry shouted: 'It's one ... no, wait ... it's two ..."

"Well, as it turned out, it was one. All of a sudden the ball was in my hands. I just handed it to Larry." And Larry just crashed into the end zone for the touchdown on the "busted" play.

"We laughed about it coming off the field," Griese grinned.

Hoosiers Edge Badgers In Big Ten

By JOE MOOSHIL
AP Sports Writer

Indiana's Hoosiers, who are finding the going rough in defense of their Big Ten basketball title, hope the pressure lets up somewhat when they take on Northwestern's Wildcats Monday night.

After losing their conference opener to Michigan, the Hoosiers came back to score a tough 52-51 victory over Wisconsin's rugged Badgers Saturday.

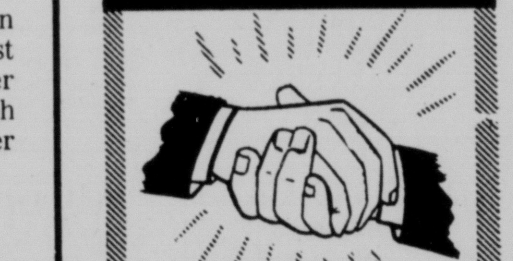

Purdue and Michigan both were victorious on the road to remain the only unbeaten teams in conference play, while Northwestern and Michigan State posted home-floor triumphs.

Purdue slugged Illinois 91-69, and Michigan held on for a 66-65 triumph at Minnesota. Michigan State dumped Ohio State 83-75, and Northwestern rolled over Iowa 87-67.

The closeness of the Wisconsin-Indiana battle was expected since the two teams were tied for 13th place in the Associated Press weekly poll.

Once again reserve John Laskowski came off the bench to save Indiana. Laskowski topped the Hoosiers with 14 points and tossed in a game-winning free throw with 27 seconds to play after Indiana had led 32-25 at the half.

Boston Celtics Defeat Atlanta

By JOHN NELSON

Atlanta Hawks' Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons is bewildered, frustrated, embarrassed ... but hopeful.

"There really wasn't much to say about the game itself," Fitzsimmons said, "for we were never really in the game." The coach's anguish was caused by a 128-105 National Basketball Association loss Sunday on national television to the Boston Celtics.

In other NBA games, the Cleveland Cavaliers edged the Philadelphia 76ers 96-94, the Milwaukee Bucks defeated the Chicago Bulls 124-94, the Kansas City-Omaha Kings beat the Portland Trail Blazers 103-99, the Houston Rockets bludgeoned the Buffalo Braves 121-112, and the Seattle SuperSonics defeated the Phoenix Suns 123-112.

In the American Basketball Association, the Carolina Cougars beat the Memphis Tams 108-106 in overtime, and the San Diego Conquistadors defeated the Indiana Pacers 141-130.

Wolfpack Defeats Maryland, 80-74

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

With David Thompson driving, the North Carolina State basketball team went for a Sunday ride.

"There was nothing you could do to stop him," said
Maryland's Tom Roy after Thompson steered the fourth-ranked Wolfpack to an 80-74
college basketball victory over the third-ranked Terrapins.

Before turning off his motor, Thompson scored 41 points, collected eight rebounds, made three steals and just about drove the Terps crazy with his constant gear-shifting.

The 6-foot-4 forward hit his first three jumpers — and he was away.
"I knew I was going to have a good game after hitting those jump shots," said Thompson, who made 14 of his 20 shots from the floor with a variety of crowd-pleasing moves.

"We wanted him to shoot from the outside," said Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell, and he made the outside shot."

In college basketball action
Saturday, No. 1 UCLA cruised to its 87th straight victory with a 66-52 decision over Stanford; No. 2 Notre Dame blasted Xavier of Ohio
87-44; North Carolina State beat Clemson 96-68; fifth-ranked North Carolina trimmed Virginia 87-75; Louisiana State upset No. 6 Vanderbilt 84-81; No. 7 Marquette defeated DePaul 63-59;
Arizona State upset No. 8 New Mexico 80-68; No. 9 Long
Beach State downed San Jose
State 72-57 and No. 10
Providence hammered
California-Irvine 75-51.

In the Second Ten, No. 11
Louisville turned back Drake
87-82; 12th-rated Alabama bounced Mississippi 85-68; Indiana tipped Wisconsin 52-51 in a contest of 13th-ranked teams; 15th-ranked South
Carolina beat Manhattan 75-
61; Seattle University stunned No. 16 Nevada-Las Vegas 82-64; No. 17 Southern California took a 76-61 decision over California; No. 18
Michigan nipped Minnesota
66-65; St. Louis University upset No. 19 Memphis State
65-61 and No. 20 Hawaii
nuded Oklahoma City 72-70.

Reserve-deep UCLA put Stanford away early with the help of sub Marques Johnson.
Trailing 20-18 at one point in the first half, UCLA staggered Stanford with a 15-6 scoring spree behind
Johnson and took a 33-26
halftime lead. Johnson came off the bench to grab four key rebounds in that binge.

The Bruins won it without starting center Bill Walton, who has a back injury.
"UCLA played real hard because they wanted to prove that they could do it without Walton," said Stanford Coach Howie Dallmar. "All the Bruins played well, and there is no way to compare this UCLA team with the rest, especially when Walton isn't playing."

Walton's back injury, suffered in a game last week against Pacific-8 Conference rival Washington State, may be severe enough to keep him out of next Saturday's important game with Notre Dame. A UCLA spokesman says Walton's back bruise is healing, but he still may not be well enough to make a two-game trip to the Midwest this week against Iowa and the Fighting Irish.

Notre Dame tuned up for its big meeting with UCLA by crushing Xavier of Ohio
behind John Shumate's 19 points and a crushing defense.

North Carolina State tuned up for Sunday's victory over Maryland by beating
Clemson Saturday behind
Towse's 19 points. The little guard also keyed the Wolf-pack's full-court press.

North Carolina fought off a Virginia rally to beat the Cavaliers. When Virginia came within three points with 1:45
remaining, the Tar Heels secured the victory with two free throws by Walter Davis,
a basket by Darrell Elston and a three-point play by Mitch Kupchak.

Glenn Hansen fired in 23 points and led a second-half rally in Louisiana State's foughtnpuacted victory over previously undefeated
Vanderbilt. The fight started with 1:08 left when

VICTORY RIDE — Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne is carried by team after defeating Texas in Cotton Bowl.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCIS DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22): Scotch a present tendency toward jealousy. Don't nurture grudges which could later prove troublesome. Instead, emphasize your innate tolerance and loyalty.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21): This is a day for giving things a "real try!" Just be certain you are heading in the right direction. Discuss goals with family and (or) knowing associates.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Don't judge the future by the past. You can shape your destiny through your own efforts. To "let be what must be" is ineffective; in fact, it's a lazy attitude.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Do not envy others. Successful acquaintances can assist you. You have an analytical mind and penetrating insight: Use them.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Be acquisitive but not grasping. Understand, be duly flexible. You have much to gain now.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a fine mind, unusual versatility and lofty ambitions. Your personality is an outgoing one and you make friends easily; can keep them, too, if you will curb tendencies toward arrogance and a biting sarcasm which alienates.

That keen wit which sometimes seeks its outlet in sarcasm, however, can be used constructively in the writing, entertainment or cartooning fields; also makes you a delightful speaker and lecturer. Other fields in which you could succeed: business, the law, statesmanship and the military.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 to May 21): Your ruling planets fairly favorable. Use poise, tactful persuasion in reaching for worthwhile and desirable objectives.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21): Mercury somewhat adverse. Watch for irritating situations and bridge them amicably and with unbiased opinion. Move briskly into productive areas.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23): Steadily increase the quality of your efforts where you can. Stimulate interest in items that bid to be of most value and satisfaction later. Ignore dissenters.

LEO (July 24 to Aug. 23): Generally benefic indications from your planets. Cooperate by approaching duties and extracurricular matters enthusiastically. Watch your schedule; keep it meaningful.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23): A more or less average day. Better finish, or at least further, existing plans and assignments. Starting new matters without proper preparation could lead to disappointment.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23): Do not take a position for or against any issue until sure of your ground. Analyze glamorous sounding propositions; they could be misleading in details.

Your Horoscope

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR TUESDAY

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 20): Invest time and energies only in projects worthy of your endeavor. In a rush to accomplish, don't by-pass important small things, however.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 to May 21): Your ruling planets fairly favorable. Use poise, tactful persuasion in reaching for worthwhile and desirable objectives.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21): Mercury somewhat adverse. Watch for irritating situations and bridge them amicably and with unbiased opinion. Move briskly into productive areas.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23): Steadily increase the quality of your efforts where you can. Stimulate interest in items that bid to be of most value and satisfaction later. Ignore dissenters.

LEO (July 24 to Aug. 23): Generally benefic indications from your planets. Cooperate by approaching duties and extracurricular matters enthusiastically. Watch your schedule; keep it meaningful.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23): A more or less average day. Better finish, or at least further, existing plans and assignments. Starting new matters without proper preparation could lead to disappointment.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23): Do not take a position for or against any issue until sure of your ground. Analyze glamorous sounding propositions; they could be misleading in details.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 23): Scotch a present tendency toward jealousy. Don't nurture grudges which could later prove troublesome. Instead, emphasize your innate tolerance and loyalty.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21): This is a day for giving things a "real try!" Just be certain you are heading in the right direction. Discuss goals with family and (or) knowing associates.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Don't judge the future by the past. You can shape your destiny through your own efforts. To "let be what must be" is ineffective; in fact, it's a lazy attitude.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Do not envy others. Successful acquaintances can assist you. You have an analytical mind and penetrating insight: Use them.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Be acquisitive but not grasping. Understand, be duly flexible. You have much to gain now.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a fine mind, unusual versatility and lofty ambitions. Your personality is an outgoing one and you make friends easily; can keep them, too, if you will curb tendencies toward arrogance and a biting sarcasm which alienates. That keen wit which sometimes seeks its outlet in sarcasm, however, can be used constructively in the writing, entertainment or cartooning fields; also makes you a delightful speaker and lecturer. Other fields in which you could succeed: business, the law, statesmanship and the military.

Views On Television

NEW YORK (AP) — Last September, "Calucci's Dept." began on CBS with high hopes and good reviews. It quickly got miserable ratings, a November cancellation and was whisked off the air.

Whoa! happen? as they say in Manhattan, where the series was made.

"Well, it just was a combination of things," sighed Bob Precht, executive producer of the comedy series about an unemployment office.

"Obviously, what hurt us initially was the fact that we didn't get a strong station lineup," Precht said. "We had a lot of holes and a lot of major markets either didn't take us or they put us in strange time periods, and it really hurt us."

By "holes" he meant that although CBS scheduled the show in a Friday night slot, a number of CBS affiliates — none is required to adhere to CBS' schedule — didn't carry it at that time, let alone day. And it didn't appear at all in many areas.

CBS officials, citing one mid-December week, said "Calucci" only was shown by 133 stations, compared with the top-rated "All in the Family," which aired on 203 stations, or 99 per cent of CBS' affiliates.

Why wasn't "Calucci" carried on more stations?

"I really don't know," Precht said, theorizing that one factor may have been that defecting affiliates felt "Calucci," followed by "Roll Out," made for a weak combination they didn't want up against a strong NBC country. Chile is second.

Austria has the highest rate of accidental death of any evening that began with "Sanford and Son."

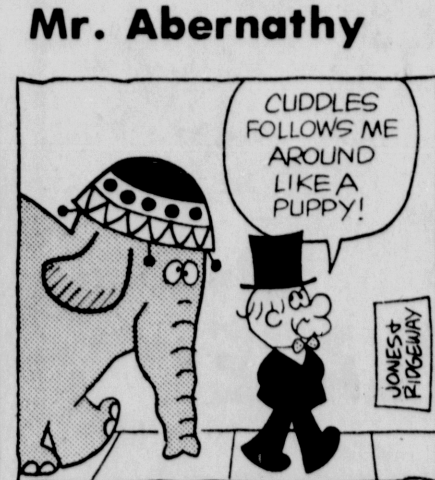

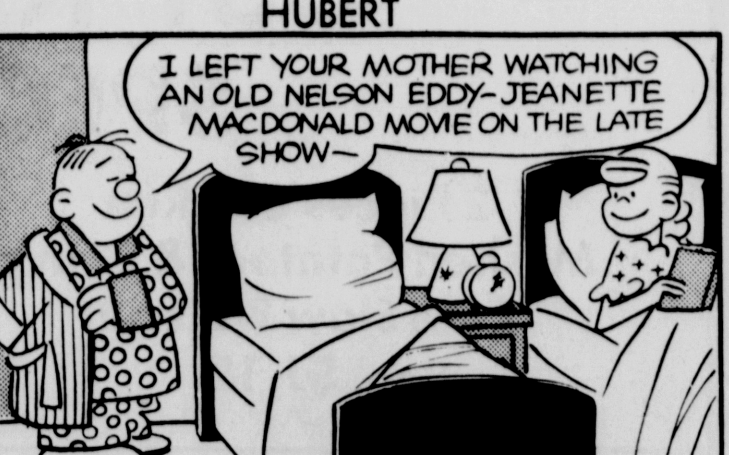

"I guess it (the combination) was a gamble that didn't work," he said. "I'm baffled by it, because I think we got reasonably good word of mouth."

"And I don't buy this business that ours was a 'New York' show and too New York-oriented," he said, referring to the oft-quoted theory that what slays them in Manhattan bores them in Peoria.

He said he wished CBS had tried "Calucci" in a new time slot, or revived it for the summer or done anything else to see if the show could draw acceptable ratings when not faced by the powerful "Sanford" series.

"There were ways I think they could have saved it," he said. "That's what really sort of sticks in my gut — that it was good and should have been given more time and was abandoned prematurely."

"And I think that's something that is wrong generally with television: we get something that may not be pure gold, but we know it's there and we just don't have the opportunity to find it."

Blind Teacher Helping Others

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP)—Robert Jackson lives in a world of shadows. But there are no shadows obscuring his goal.

Jackson, virtually blind since age 8, teaches deaf-blind children at Toledo Public Schools. Part time, he trains teachers for the visually impaired at Bowling Green State University.

"Ohio is as good as I've seen," Jackson said. "It's progressive, it takes into account that the children we are seeing are more handicapped than we used to see."

Jackson said traditionally a blind youngster was normal in other ways.

"Medical science now is saving a lot of kids who have multiple disabilities," he said, with blindness often accompanied by mental retardation, deafness or some other disability.

"In Toledo, we're working with deaf-blind children," he said. "These aren't Hellen Keller types of children, they do have residual sight and residual hearing."

"It's mostly a matter of time and patience and persistence," he said. Jackson's eyesight began to deteriorate when he was 5 years old, after being stricken with the high fever of a childhood disease.

By age 8, he could see only shadows. But Jackson wasn't ready to quit. A blind high school teacher encouraged him with a constant, "Hang in there."

And high school sports such as wrestling taught him self-confidence, he said.

He graduated from Alfred University in New York and received his masters degree from Hunter College. He also studied at Peabody College in Tennessee and at Syracuse University.

After college, he faced employers' prejudice against the blind.

"I sent out 50 letters and received one 'maybe' in return," he said.

Attitudes toward the blind are changing, he said, but many employers still don't want to "take a chance."

Monetary Meet Likely To Falter

ROME (AP) — Uncertainty due to the Arab oil squeeze makes unlikely any substantial progress toward international monetary reform at a meeting of some of the world's leading financial experts.

Their meeting opened in Rome today.

The stated task before the International Monetary Fund's Committee of 20 finance ministers and central bankers is to work out an orderly way to revise the exchange rates of the world's currencies when such adjustments become necessary.

Their goal is to avoid the repeated international financial crises of the last three years, like those set off by two devaluations of the United States dollar.

The 126-nation IMF failed at its meeting in Kenya last September to reach agreement on a new system. The Committee of 20 agreed to put their deputies to work and to meet again this month. They set a deadline of July 31, 1974, for completing their work.

The deputies are meeting today and Tuesday, and the ministers, including Secretary of the Treasury George P. Shultz, on Thursday and Friday. But the deadline will probably be postponed; the United States reportedly feels the present system of floating currency rates is working well and is in no hurry to change it.

Most of the talk in Rome is expected to be about the Arab oil cutbacks, the soaring price of crude oil and the harm this will do to the economies of many

4 Weekend Road Deaths For Ohio

Four persons, including a Springfield mother and her nine-year-old son, died on Ohio highways over the weekend.

Stove Blamed In Man's Death

RAVENNA, Ohio (AP)—An overheated coal stove has been blamed for a fire that killed Harvey Vanderpool in his home near Ravenna Sunday.

Ravenna Twp. Fire Chief James Batsch said Vanderpool, reported to be in his late 40s, apparently was overcome by smoke while trying to get water to put out the fire in the living room stove.

The body was found in the kitchen of the two-story frame home.

Satellite Eyes Strip Mine Reclamation

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Strip mining and reclamation efforts can be controlled nationwide by geologists and authorities, according to an Ohio State University geology professor.

"Not only is it possible to delineate areas that have been stripped, but lakes, which commonly form between stripped areas and the highway, are also evident," said Wayne A. Pettyjohn, the professor who worked with the results of a National Aeronautics and Space Administration satellite which viewed southeastern Ohio's surface mining areas.

The eye of the Americas Earth Resources Technology Satellite-1 took an overall picture of 590 miles of land in Belmont, Coshocton, Guernsey, Muskingum and Tuscarawas counties. The photographs revealed disrupted soil and bedrock of the stripped areas and differences in tones which indicated reclamation.

At the time, Pettyjohn said the satellite only photographed the Ohio area. Now, NASA is considering a second launching which could view western lands expected to be stripped over the rest of the century, he said.

Through a comparison of different photos from different years, Pettyjohn said, "We know that areas were stripped and when and how reclamation is progressing."

nearly four years of controversial changes in Navy ways.

The signal appeared in Warner's letter of guidance to a board of admirals that will choose this year's crop of new admirals.

It came as top Pentagon officials weighed possible choices among the Navy's senior admirals to succeed Admiral Elmo Zumwalt Jr., as chief of Naval Operations.

Zumwalt, who shook up more of the Navy's traditional practices than any of his predecessors, is due to retire in July after completing his four-year term. Under the law, he may not be reappointed.

Warner's letter, which became available to The Associated Press, carried no criticism of Zumwalt, but it repeatedly stressed Navy traditions.

"Although our Navy is responsive to change there are in my judgment, principles and traditions which have borne the test of time, continue to serve us well, and merit restatement," he wrote.

At another point, Warner indicated that one of the important criteria in selecting captains for promotion to admiral should be "who has performed in a manner consistent with our traditions and leadership."

After Zumwalt became the Navy's uniformed chief in 1970, he initiated many changes designed to improve Navy life in hopes of attracting and holding young Navy men and women and "restoring the fun and zest of going to sea."

Many of his moves, such as trying to ease family separations, reduce paperwork, and stimulate promotion opportunities won widespread support.

But he drew severe criticism from older officers and noncommissioned officers by relaxing restrictions on dress and hair styles, encouraging commanders to consult with their men more often, and otherwise departing from the old ways in the Navy. Younger officers and men applauded

Zumwalt's moves.

Associates of Warner said it would be a mistake to view his letter to the Selection Board as foreshadowing a return to things as they were before Zumwalt, but one source said the Navy secretary was saying, in effect, "let's slow down a bit."

The next CNO is expected to be a middle ground officer who will, as one source put it "keep the helm steady."

Among those mentioned as possible successors to Zumwalt are:

Adm. James L. Nollaway, 51, now vice chief of naval operations; Adm. Maurice F. Weisner, 56, a former vice chief and now commander of the U.S. Pacific Fleet. Weisner heads the admiral selection board, and Adm. Ralph W. Cousins, 58, still another former vice chief of naval operations and now commander in chief, Atlantic.

Monetary Meet Likely To Falter

ROME (AP) — Uncertainty due to the Arab oil squeeze makes unlikely any substantial progress toward international monetary reform at a meeting of some of the world's leading financial experts.

Their meeting opened in Rome today.

The stated task before the International Monetary Fund's Committee of 20 finance ministers and central bankers is to work out an orderly way to revise the exchange rates of the world's currencies when such adjustments become necessary.

Their goal is to avoid the repeated international financial crises of the last three years, like those set off by two devaluations of the United States dollar.

The 126-nation IMF failed at its meeting in Kenya last September to reach agreement on a new system. The Committee of 20 agreed to put their deputies to work and to meet again this month. They set a deadline of July 31, 1974, for completing their work.

The deputies are meeting today and Tuesday, and the ministers, including Secretary of the Treasury George P. Shultz, on Thursday and Friday. But the deadline will probably be postponed; the United States reportedly feels the present system of floating currency rates is working well and is in no hurry to change it.

Most of the talk in Rome is expected to be about the Arab oil cutbacks, the soaring price of crude oil and the harm this will do to the economies of many nations.

"I see very little to be optimistic about," said one senior delegate. "The oil problem really creates too many unknowns."

The Arab oil squeeze already has caused significant changes in the relative value of currencies. Because the United States is far less affected by the oil squeeze than Western Europe or Japan, the dollar has made a strong recovery and is back where it was before devaluation last February.

The oil price increases are expected to cost the industrial nations between $30 billion and $50 billion this year, giving many of them a deficit in foreign trade.

If a nation makes a profit in its foreign trade, its currency gets stronger and is valued upward. A loss on foreign trade has the opposite effect. One goal of the monetary reforms is to establish an orderly procedure for making these changes.

But many economists fear that, unless the industrialized nations first can find a way to cooperate on limiting the projected trade deficit, there is a danger each will go it alone with protectionist policies and engage in disastrous competitive devaluations and trade wars. One early casualty would be monetary reform.

The economists believe there are strong incentives for cooperation. They say a stable monetary system could bring some of the Arab oil wealth back to the industrialized nations as investments or to developing nations as aid.

4 Weekend Road Deaths For Ohio

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Four persons, including a Springfield mother and her nine-year-old son, died on Ohio highways over the weekend.

The two died in a car-truck crash in Springfield Saturday. The other deaths involved an eight-year-old Ross County pedestrian and a Monroe, Mich. motorist in separate mishaps Sunday.

The death toll was one below last week's five fatalities. The Ohio Highway Patrol said the gasoline shortage and chilly temperatures kept many motorists off the highways.

The traffic count began at 6 p.m. Friday and ended midnight Sunday.

Stove Blamed In Man's Death

RAVENNA, Ohio (AP)—An overheated coal stove has been blamed for a fire that killed Harvey Vanderpool in his home near Ravenna Sunday.

Ravenna Twp. Fire Chief James Batsch said Vanderpool, reported to be in his late 40s, apparently was overcome by smoke while trying to get water to put out the fire in the living room stove.

The body was found in the kitchen of the two-story frame home.

Satellite Eyes Strip Mine Reclamation

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Strip mining and reclamation efforts can be controlled nationwide by geologists and authorities, according to an Ohio State University geology professor.

"Not only is it possible to delineate areas that have been stripped, but lakes, which commonly form between stripped areas and the highway, are also evident," said Wayne A. Pettyjohn, the professor who worked with the results of a National Aeronautics and Space Administration satellite which viewed southeastern Ohio's surface mining areas.

The eye of the Americas Earth Resources Technology Satellite-1 took an overall picture of 590 miles of land in Belmont, Coshocton, Guernsey, Muskingum and Tuscarawas counties. The photographs revealed disrupted soil and bedrock of the stripped areas and differences in tones which indicated reclamation.

At the time, Pettyjohn said the satellite only photographed the Ohio area. Now, NASA is considering a second launching which could view western lands expected to be stripped over the rest of the century, he said.

Through a comparison of different photos from different years, Pettyjohn said, "We know that areas were stripped and when and how reclamation is progressing."

nearly four years of controversial changes in Navy ways.

The signal appeared in Warner's letter of guidance to a board of admirals that will choose this year's crop of new admirals.

It came as top Pentagon officials weighed possible choices among the Navy's senior admirals to succeed Admiral Elmo Zumwalt Jr., as chief of Naval Operations.

Zumwalt, who shook up more of the Navy's traditional practices than any of his predecessors, is due to retire in July after completing his four-year term. Under the law, he may not be reappointed.

Warner's letter, which became available to The Associated Press, carried no criticism of Zumwalt, but it repeatedly stressed Navy traditions.

"Although our Navy is responsive to change there are in my judgment, principles and traditions which have borne the test of time, continue to serve us well, and merit restatement," he wrote.

At another point, Warner indicated that one of the important criteria in selecting captains for promotion to admiral should be "who has performed in a manner consistent with our traditions and leadership."

After Zumwalt became the Navy's uniformed chief in 1970, he initiated many changes designed to improve Navy life in hopes of attracting and holding young Navy men and women and "restoring the fun and zest of going to sea."

Many of his moves, such as trying to ease family separations, reduce paperwork, and stimulate promotion opportunities won widespread support.

But he drew severe criticism from older officers and noncommissioned officers by relaxing restrictions on dress and hair styles, encouraging commanders to consult with their men more often, and otherwise departing from the old ways in the Navy. Younger officers and men applauded

Zumwalt's moves.

Associates of Warner said it would be a mistake to view his letter to the Selection Board as foreshadowing a return to things as they were before Zumwalt, but one source said the Navy secretary was saying, in effect, "let's slow down a bit."

The next CNO is expected to be a middle ground officer who will, as one source put it "keep the helm steady."

Among those mentioned as possible successors to Zumwalt are:

Adm. James L. Nollaway, 51, now vice chief of naval operations; Adm. Maurice F. Weisner, 56, a former vice chief and now commander of the U.S. Pacific Fleet. Weisner heads the admiral selection board, and Adm. Ralph W. Cousins, 58, still another former vice chief of naval operations and now commander in chief, Atlantic.
